JAPS FALL INTO TRAP AT MILNE BAY

Russian Lines Firm Before Nazis At Stalingrad

FARTHER NORTH RED OFFENSIVE STILL GAINING

Hundreds of Tanks and Planes Fail To Break Soviet Lines Along Volga.

By The Associated Press

The weight of manpower and machines that the Germans continue to throw against the defenses of Stalingrad bounced back today on the unyielding lines of its defenders while the Red army, on a new offensive to the north, furnished evidence of Russia's unbroken power.

Hundreds of Nazi tanks and planes screened large assault forces on the approaches of the river city but for the sixth day Russian fighters kept intact a line that the Germans could not pierce.

Meanwhile, the Soviet information bureau said there had been no change and Nazi dispatches from the Stalingrad front indicated the Germans were leaving men and machines on the battle field in the still unrelenting effort to smash through the Soviet armored lines.

The German high command said Axis forces had pushed from the south to a point only 15 miles from Stalingrad and that night raiding planes again had set vast fires in the city, blasting particularly railroad and airport targets.

To the north, where the Red army has launched its own "second front" in the drive on archers of Germany's 1941 winter line, Soviet forces have smashed past the pivotal stronghold of Rzhev both to the north and the south, have cleared the whole northern bank of the Volga and fought into the city itself, Russian officers on the scene said today.

Show of Red Power

Whether this offensive is strong or timely enough to help save Stalingrad remains to be seen.

Nevertheless, it is unrolling with a show of power which suggests that the Germans may find themselves suddenly uprooted from a vital front they long have held secure and almost certainly will have to draw off men, machines and planes from the Caucasus to strengthen it.

Although the Berlin communique said the Russian thrusts had been repelled, its language—Russian attacks with "strong infantry and tank formations" northwest of Moscow and below Leningrad—indicated the concern with which the Nazis are taking this burst of Soviet strength on the central Russian front.

Evans spent his boyhood in Marion, the family having moved from Galion when he was a boy. He attended Marion public schools, graduated from Harding high school and attended Ohio State college at Springfield before joining the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co 10 years ago. For the last six years he has been in charge of operations for the company, now being at Hillsboro as the company's representative.

Evans family will move from Hillsboro to Columbus. Evans is married and is the father of three children.

Evans was in Marion today to attend a meeting of industrial representatives from this area at which their ure ration procedure plans to be back in operation some time this week.

TAKES RENT POST

JOHN K. BARTRAM

MARION RENT HEAD NAMED

John K. Bartram Appointed Director To Enforce OPA Regulations.

John K. Bartram of 422 Forest street, attorney, will be director for the defense rental area in Marion county, which will be brought under federal rent regulation Tuesday.

Announcement of his appointment, made by the office of price administration in Washington came late Saturday in an Associated Press report from the capital.

Mr. Bartram said this morning that although he was aware of being considered for the post he had received no formal notification and was "greatly surprised" at the news announcement.

Until the official notice is received, Mr. Bartram said he will make no statement as to the policy which will be followed in bringing Marion county under federal regulation as a defense-rental area. He said a regional OPA official probably will be sent to Marion to assist in setting up the office and beginning operations.

In Practice 9 Years

Mr. Bartram a graduate of Harding High school in 1925, received his bachelor of arts degree from Ohio Wesleyan university in 1933. He passed the bar examination in the summer of 1933 and in August of that year became associated in the practice of law with his father, John H. Bartram of 402 South State street, who has practiced law in Marion for 50 years. Their offices are located at 144½ East Center street.

Mr. Bartram is married and has a daughter Constance 5 whose wife is the former Miss Elizabeth Carl.

He is a member of the Ohio State Bar association and this year is serving on the law revision committee. In 1938-39 he served as president of the junior bar section of the state association. He is a member of the Marion County Bar association which he served as president in 1935, and of the Barristers club an organization of young attorneys. He is the immediate past president of the Marion Rotary club and is now serving as a member of the board of directors. He is a member of Phi Kappa Psi social fraternity and Phi Delta Phi legal fraternity.

To Use March 1 Ceiling

First announcement that a federal administrator would be named to take charge of rents in Marion county on Sept. 1 was made Aug. 18 when 38 districts throughout the nation were brought under federal regulation as defense-rental areas. The announcement, from the office of Price Administrator Leon Henderson, was made from the Cleveland regional office of war information.

At that time it was announced that the federal administrator would use March 1, 1942 as the rent ceiling date and that all of Marion county was within the administrator's jurisdiction.

60 Per Cent of War Plant Operators to Be Women

Scioto Ordnance Plant Looks To Marion and Nearby Counties for Bulk of Workers.

When thousands of production workers step into operation of the Scioto Ordnance Plant in the near future to help speed up the flow of Uncle Sam's war materials 60 per cent of them will be women.

Seventy-five per cent of the employes will be production workers many of them married women who never before had tried their hand at factory work.

Residents of Marion and nearby counties will be given first opportunity to supply workers. The field from which employes will be drawn will radiate from Marion only far enough to meet the demand.

These and other phases of the employment policy were outlined today by officials of the United States Rubber Co. which will operate the plant for the war department.

Receiving Applications

Through the office of Stanley Luke, employment manager for the plants operation the company already has received some 4,000 job applications and will need many more before the working force is organized.

It is expected that among the skilled employes many will be from other cities because of a commitment the company has made to Marion plants doing war work. This pledge is not to hire a person away from any Marion war plant without a written release from his present employer.

The list of jobs to be filled covers many classifications, but those open to production workers with little training or experience are largely jobs involving mechanical assembly operations. The others include machine shop workers, carpenters, plumbers, blacksmiths, repairmen, office workers, supervisors, dispatchers, stock selectors, firemen, patrolmen, truck drivers, bus drivers, doctors, nurses, first aid workers, chemists, accountants and a long list of others.

Supervisors Sought

Attention at first was centered on employment of guards and firemen, but with these departments in operation officials are now concentrating on the employment and training of supervisors. These will be sent to other ordnance plants engaged in similar work. After this and a study of all phases of the job to be done at the Scioto Ordnance Plant, they will be ready to start training the first group of workers. Among the types of workers now sought are graduate chemists who have specialized in certain fields, especially in explosives. However, the company is receiving applications daily for workers in all phases of the plant program.

It is expected that the first group of production workers will be called to jobs very soon, and others at short intervals afterward.

The fact that the Scioto Ordnance Plant will have its own railroad yards, its own locomotives and other equipment makes necessary the hiring of train crews such as engineers, firemen, conductors and a yardmaster.

In view of plans to operate 20 trailer buses each having a capacity of 136 persons, the plant will need a crew of experienced drivers. In addition it will need chauffeurs to operate some 130 automobiles.

From the outset, an intensive training program for workers will be maintained. Those with ability and ambition will be able to advance rapidly and emphasis will be placed on both efficiency and safety.

An investigation of the citizenship of each applicant is required and each person, in the course of being accepted for work, must have his or her fingerprints taken and a photograph made for an identification badge.

To Move Office

The company's employment office is in the former Stoltz garage building on North Prospect street. It will be moved this week to the service and employment building in the administration area of the

The race program this year is attracting entries from many states and promises racing enthusiasts a harness program approaching Grand Circuit quality.

Exhibits promise variety and quality in both the grange and junior fair groups and the livestock barns are expected to be filled to capacity. The junior fair parade and the livestock showing on Thursday and Friday will be outstanding features in their line and entertainment will include a midway of shows, band music, a circus and hill billy program.

FAIR ENTRY LISTS HIT HIGH TOTALS

Saturday's entry deadline found Marion county fair departments well filled. Eighty-five horses are entered for the horse show Tuesday and Wednesday nights. There are more than 100 harness horses on the grounds for afternoon races and more are arriving daily. The list of entries in the various departments include 50 draft horses, 90 cattle, 200 hogs, 150 sheep and sizeable exhibits of fine arts, poultry and vegetables.

OUTLAW IRISH ARMY IRKED BY U. S. TROOPS

Calls Presence of Americans an Act of Aggression.

By The Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, Aug. 31—The outlawed Irish Republican army issued a manifesto today charging that the presence of United States troops in northern Ireland is an act of aggression.

It asserted that the IRA reserves the right to use "whatever measures present themselves" to clear the territory of such forces.

If hostilities were resumed between the British and Irish and the Americans were drawn into the conflict, it said, the responsibility must rest with those "who presumed to use northeast Ireland as a military base without the Irish people's free consent."

(The Irish Republican army, an extremist organization, has been outlawed both in Eire and northern Ireland. It is violently anti-British and against the partition of Ireland. It has been charged in the past with many acts of terrorism.)

Courthouse, Financial Institutions To Close

Offices in the courthouse and Marion's three banks and two federal loan companies have announced closing dates for the Marion County Fair which opens tomorrow.

Offices in the courthouse will be closed Thursday and Friday afternoons to allow the officials and employes to attend the fair and the banks and loan companies will close at noon on Wednesday. The courthouse officers will close at 12 o'clock on both days.

BRITISH SHIPS HIT ROMMEL BASE IN AFRICA

1,000 Shells Poured Into Tank Repair Depot in 42 Minutes, Allen Reports.

By LARRY ALLEN
AP War Correspondent

ABOARD A DESTROYER OF THE BRITISH MEDITERRANEAN FLEET, Aug. 30—(Delayed)—British warships smashed Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's big axis supply base in the Egyptian desert south of El Daba with a pre-dawn bombardment today and fought their way home under ceaseless dive-bombing concentrated on this flotilla leader.

Naval gunners fired 1,000 high explosive shells into the sleeping German-Italian base in 42 minutes. They left a wide area of destruction and huge fires among barracks, tank parks, repair shops, ammunition and fuel depots.

Casualties among Rommel's armored corps technicians, vital for maintenance of his tanks and armored cars in any contemplated offensive, were regarded by British observers as heavy.

Throughout the British attack there was little answering fire from the shore. The action was broken off in the moonlight at 4:57 a. m. and this destroyer pulled away, followed by the other warships.

Germans Open Attack

Soon after sunrise, the Germans launched an attack with more than 50 Stukas, one of the fiercest and most intensive ever loosed against surface craft.

Out of the sun swooped six Stukas for the first round.

They made for this destroyer like a beast after prey. Pom-pom batteries, machine guns and turret guns of the destroyer were brought into play. The warship added its defensive fire, but the Stuka pilots paid little attention.

They droned close, pulled out of their dives, and there was the terrifying swish of heavy bombs falling into the sea close alongside the destroyer, the bombs gave her a huge jolt, but she plowed on.

Heavier ack-ack came in succession. Thousands of empty shell cases littered the decks, gunners were weary and the superstructure was riddled by bullets.

The dive-bombers persisted until the destroyer was well within sight of our home base.

Nevertheless, the commander reported the casualties were slight. I escaped with cuts, bruises and shock.

There were times I thought I would never get out of it alive.

It's funny, but once when I had my face pressed to the deck a little brown cockroach scampered before my eyes. My first impulse was to kill it. But I knew it wanted to live. I flicked it away.

The dive-bombers came in teams of sixes or tens.

Big bombs washed the destroyer's decks with geysers of water and sand from the bottom of the Mediterranean.

Shore Batteries Fire

German shore batteries then opened fire.

Simultaneously, more Stukas roared overhead. Near misses rocked the vessel.

A dozen or more German shells whistled over my head before the destroyer passed out of range of the land-based guns. The destroyer never answered the shore shelling. We were involved enough with the Stukas.

A Nazi flier dropped a stick of eight bombs on our port side. Smoke poured from the tail of his plane as he pulled away.

British fighters appeared to battle the enemy squadrons and brought down one plane.

Italian bombers and Messerschmitt fighter-bombers sped into the fray and explosives fell by the score.

Within sight of our home quay, the Axis arrows ceased their assaults.

SUB VICTIMS SHOW DECLINE

Sinkings Drop Off As AP Tabulator Records Total of 449.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Aug. 31 — The battle of the Atlantic, grown to major front proportions in nearly eight months of war, has claimed 449 allied and neutral merchant ships and the lives of more than 3,000 seamen, an Associated Press tabulation of announced western Atlantic sinkings disclosed today, but the number of victims of enemy submarines dropped astonishingly in July and August.

Still missing today were at least 1,760 crew members and passengers most of whom may be considered lost, but 13,810 others were rescued and landed safely at western Atlantic ports and up until this morning only 23 merchantmen had been announced as sunk during August.

Figures show that June with 97 ships sunk was the most disastrous period in the United Nations' fight against the axis undersea raiders. Forty-five reported ship losses for July gave the first indication of how the tides were progressing.

Nine Last Week

Even sharper than the recent monthly figure as evidence of the reduced number of sinkings was an announced total of only nine victims for last week. Many past weeks had seen three times that number reported sent to the bottom.

Two incidents last week provided a further hint as to how merchantmen were faring lately:

1. A Berlin report admitted that Nazi U-boats were encoun-

ARMY TO GET MAN HELD AT BUCYRUS

Bank Decides Against Filing of Any Charge.

Special to The Star

BUCYRUS, Aug. 31—Crawford county draft officials said today the 22-year-old Bucyrus youth who was held while investigation was being made of the loss by a bank of $10,000 in currency Wednesday, will report to Ft. Hayes, Columbus, for induction into army service tomorrow.

The youth, who found the package of money which was being transported from the postoffice to the Bucyrus Farmers & Citizens bank when it was lost, was turned over to draft officials Saturday night. Because most of the money was recovered the bank declined to file any charges against the youth. He had been scheduled to leave Friday with a group of inductees.

HEAVY LOSSES SUFFERED BY LANDING FORCE

Allied Land Forces Lie in Wait As Enemy Makes Landing in New Guinea.

By The Associated Press

Australian ground troops, fighting in the muddy jungle of southeastern New Guinea with United States and Australian air units aiding from above have smashed the Japanese invaders of the Milne bay area in a carefully laid trap.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, in a special communique today, announced that Australian troops commanded by Maj. Cyril Albert Clowes, an Australian veteran of the Middle East campaigns, had driven the Japanese out of the narrow peninsula north of Milne bay where they are being "rapidly reduced."

Although a portion of the Japanese forces probably was saved from destruction by evacuation on Japanese warships at night, their losses have been heavy, the communique said.

Supplies Abandoned

All of their heavy supplies, including tanks, were abandoned on the narrow beach of Milne bay, which they entered last Wednesday.

The communique, passed out jubilantly at MacArthur's headquarters, told how the allied command prepared for the Japanese thrust, the fourth enemy attempt to reach the advanced allied outpost at Port Moresby, New Guinea.

"The enemy fell into the trap with disastrous results to him," the communique concluded.

Milne bay is only 420 miles from the nearest point on the Australian mainland and some 225 miles southeast of the allied base at Port Moresby.

(Seven hundred miles to the east, in the Solomon Islands, the only official report was of two Japanese bombing raids Friday on American positions at Guadalcanal. A communique issued in Washington said three enemy bombers and four fighters were shot down. Damage to American positions was described as minor and no U. S. planes were lost.)

Bitter fighting still was in progress in the north peninsula area, but the communique said the area was "rapidly being cleared of the enemy."

Australian Imperials and Militia, "brilliantly supported by American and Australian air units," were credited with achieving the success.

U. S. Troops There

United States service troops were in the Milne bay area as well, previous announcements said.

The Japanese who escaped from the Milne bay trap apparently were taken off on eight destroyers and a cruiser which slipped into the bay Saturday night. Allied bomber pilots, hampered by bad weather, were unable to break up the action.

The Japanese Milne bay adventure was the fourth phase of an endeavor to capture Port Moresby, the communique said.

The Japanese first tried to turn its left flank with their landings at Lae and Salamaua, but this "proved impracticable," the communique said.

The next attempt was aimed at the rear. A large convoy force was engaged in this operation, but it was intercepted in the Coral sea and "repulsed and dissipated by air and sea action."

The third effort, which the communique described as a "weak attempt," was the landing in the Buna-Cona region on the northeast shore of New Guinea and the advance inland to Kokoda only 60 miles from Port Moresby.

This action still is in progress. The communique reported, the enemy "is subjecting himself to extraordinary air losses because of the extreme vulnerability of his exposed position."

"His latest effort," it added, "was to turn the right flank by a surprise attack at Milne bay. The move was anticipated, however, and prepared for with great care. With complete secrecy, the position was occupied by our forces and converted into a strong point.

"The enemy fell into the trap with disastrous results to him."

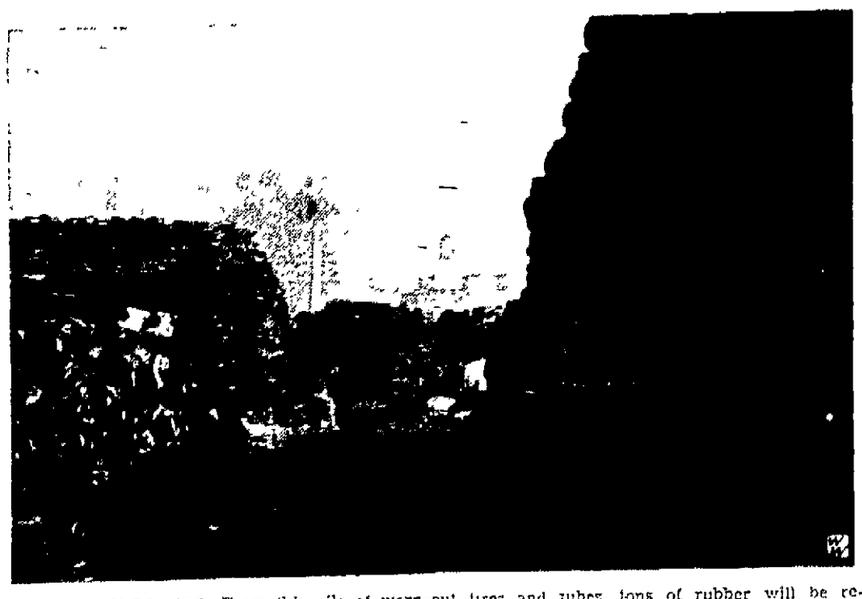
ABC of the Rubber Situation

Drive Carefully: Rationing Ahead



ELASTIC TREASURE—From this pile of worn-out tires and tubes, tons of rubber will be reclaimed, and much of it will go back into tires for the Army and essential civilian use. Officials believe reclaimed rubber will continue to be one source of wartime supply.

This is one of a series of three articles on the country's rubber situation.

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE
Wide World Features Writer

WASHINGTON—In the fog of conflicting statements, encouraging and gloomy, which have shrouded the tire outlook for John Auto-User, a few facts stand out in the comparative clear

1—The making of rubber is a war production job.

2—Donald M. Nelson is the boss of war production.

3—Boss Nelson's latest word is that despite efforts to increase the production of synthetic rubber, purchase of automobile tires for pleasure driving is out for the duration.

A lot of companies and individuals with production savvy and scientific talent are working on various methods of producing synthetic. But the output for the next year or two, according to government rubber authorities, will be sufficent to meet only military and essential civilian requirements with heavy emphasis on the essential.

So until Mr. Nelson, or President Roosevelt himself, says that new tires will be available for ordinary use, you had better make up your mind to make your old tires last as long as possible.

Rationing Seems Certain

The investigation by the rubber fact-finding committee, headed by Bernard M. Baruch, will be a basis for action by the government on nation-wide rationing of gasoline or possibly on mileage control through speedometer checking.

The aim of limited motoring is to conserve what Nelson has called our biggest stockpile of rubber—the tires on some 27,000,000 passenger cars—in order to avert a breakdown in civilian transportation that would retard war production.

Virtually all rubber experts, in the government and out of it, believe that keeping essential civilian automobiles going is a close second in importance to the need of rubber for direct military purposes. In fact, the real problem is not getting rubber for war use, but rather obtaining and conserving it for civilian tires to prevent disruption of the national economy. In most industrial areas from 75 to 90 per cent of the workers go to and from their jobs by motor car.

There has been talk that Uncle Sam might find it necessary to requisition private automobiles with good tires. Officials say they want to avoid this, for the reason that should a large proportion of cars be taken over, the truck, bus and train transit systems would be swamped.

Anything like a wholesale requisitioning of cars and all five tires is considered likely only as a last resort, but the government might find it necessary to take all "hoarded" tires and some spares

Synthetics The Answer

The fact remains, however, that with Japan holding 90 per cent of the world's natural rubber producing areas and straddling the lanes to another 7 per cent, the infant synthetic industry must supply the Allied war machine.

The other 3 per cent of the crude producing areas, located in South and Central America and Africa, will be of relatively small help. However, shipments from these countries, together with a substantial reserve of scrap rubber, should come in right handy.

We know how to make synthetic rubber, but obtaining abundant supplies in a relatively short time is a different matter.

The synthetic rubber maker has to stand in line with shipbuilders, the manufacturers of tanks and of airplanes for the scarce metals, machines and tools, compressors and generators which are, on rigidly-guarded priority lists.

We apparently have more than enough rubber to meet this year's direct and indirect military requirements. Government figures show total 1942 supplies of 1,211,000 tons and United Nations' requirements of 813,000 tons That indicates a carryover for 1943 of 428,000 tons.

This year's output of synthetic has been estimated at only 28,000 to 32,000 tons.

To meet 1943 military and essential civilian needs of some 866,000 tons, production of synthetic must be stepped up to more than 300,000 tons. War Production Boss Nelson recently estimated an output of 338,000 tons in 1943.

Reclaim Possibilities

Government supply figures presented to the Truman Committee did not include an estimate on scrap rubber, probably because the amount recoverable for reclaim purposes was not known. From 400,000 to 600,000 tons is considered a reasonable guess

Fairly good scrap mixed with crude makes a good rubber product. As scrap is used over and over again it declines rapidly in quality. The ratio of reclaimed rubber to new crude in auto tires has been determined by the cost of the tires. Average price tires have contained from 10 to 50 per cent of reclaimed rubber.

Last year reclaiming plants processed some 400,000 tons of scrap to produce more than 300,000 tons of reclaim. Similar operations this year would produce a tidy amount of reclaim.

Women Employes of Ordnance Plant Engineers' Office Now in Uniforms

Attractive Attire Introduced at Tea Given As Formal Opening of Newly Equipped Lounge.

Another reminder that women are playing their part in World War II is being brought to the attention of Marion residents with the appearance of smartly uniformed women in khaki and olive drab. The uniforms are worn by the women workers of the area engineer's office of the War department at the Scioto ordnance plant.

To initiate the new uniforms and also to formally open the newly-equipped women's lounge in the office of the area engineers, the women employes of the office entertained with a tea Thursday afternoon in their new quarters Both are the results of weeks of planning and work.

Practical and Attractive

The idea of uniforms originated with the women employes who find the skirt, jacket and blouse idea not only more practical but decidedly smarter when it comes to work-a-day costumes. Completing the uniforms are cocky overseas caps and the brass button-trimmed jackets have an arm insignia designed by the sign shop on the project, which embodies the initials of the plant together with the corps engineers castle.

The lounge is located in an unused office room of the building and furniture is some purchased for the dormitory. The women purchased drapes and venetian blinds and some furniture has been provided. A ping pong table has been set up and as time goes on other recreational features may be added. The lounge has been planned as a social center and will be available to women in the administrative area. Approximately 75 women will have access to the place.

Patriotic Decorations

A patriotic note was carried out for the tea, with the table colorful in red, white and blue. Presiding were Miss Jean Eisher of Marion and Mrs. Lily Rigrish of Caledonia. Guests included the key personnel of all organizations at the plant and wives of the area engineers, Hunkin-Conkey Co., Holabird & Root and the U. S. Rubber Co. staff. Approximately 150 guests were entertained.

Mrs. Lillian Moser was general chairman for the tea and assisting were Avis Landon, Violet Brown, Margaret Haynes, June Greenland and Bessie Henderson. refreshments: Dorothy Dury, Ruth Porter and Ruth Schaumleffel, funds, Florence Pinkerton, Martha Poling and Ruth Schenck invitations

FARM SECURITY AID INCREASED IN OHIO

4,500 More Families Will Receive Help Next Year.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 29—The farm security administration will be able to help 4,500 more Ohio farm families increase wartime production next year, state FSA Director A. L. Sorensen announced today.

Additional funds allocated to Ohio FSA for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1943, will make possible expansion of the loan and guidance program, but some 30,000 needy families could use such help if more money were available, Sorensen added.

About 1,500 can be brought into the FSA program and more also can be given to 3,000 of the 11,000 Ohio farms already operating under the wing of the FSA, he asserted.

A total of 29,439 Ohio families —or one-eighth of all Ohio farms —have received credit or other assistance since the FSA program started in 1935. Almost half of the $12,064,592 in loans has been repaid, Sorensen said.

Loans are intended to be self-liquidating through greater and more efficient farm production and management.

Sorensen said the average participating family had increased its net worth from $1,112 to $1,458 or 31 per cent.

"Self-sufficiency taught and encouraged by FSA helps the family income stretch farther," the director said. "The average Ohio family which produced $150 worth of food, clothing and other products for home use before entering the FSA program, increased home production to $281 last year —an increase of 87 per cent."

STEEL MARKETING REMAINS CONFUSED

Quota System Fails To Straighten Out Problems.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, Aug 31 — The quota system and WPB's production requirements plan have put steel delivery schedules in "a state of flux," the magazine Steel says today, adding:

"Although application of new ratings is being done selectively the upper range is nearly as crowded as was the case when A-1-A represented the top.

"Steel producers find it increasingly difficult to make definite delivery promises and some do not attempt it on receipt of the order, even under AA-1 ratings. This presents difficulties for consumers but producers insist that short of definite directives or allocation they can not know what they will be able to do.

"Continuing its near-capacity level, ingot production last week advanced one-half point to 98 per cent on small gains at six producing centers." Production figures by districts included: Cincinnati 91, up 3; Cleveland 99, up 4½; Detroit 89, down 2; Wheeling 78, down 5½; Youngstown, unchanged at 96; Pittsburgh, unchanged at 94.

The United States will obtain all of the tungsten produced in Bolivia in the next three years.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

The aviation first aid kit is somewhat larger and more varied in its assortment of supplies than the regular first aid kit issued to every soldier. Complete, the aviation kit costs about $5.

The purchase of a $5 War Savings Stamp to supply one of these kits may save the life of an American aviator. Thousands of these kits are needed to equip our rapidly growing air force. Do your part. Invest at least ten percent of your income in War Bonds every payday. Join the payroll allotment plan at your store or factory, or buy War Bonds at your bank, postoffice or other issuing agent. Remember, for every $3 you invest, you receive $4 at maturity.

More Sergeant Yorks

NOT every soldier in the United States army is a Sergeant York who can pop the head off a turkey at 50 paces with a rifle bullet but, man for man, they are the world's best marksmen.

America is a land of sportsmen. Millions of boys learn to shoot as soon as they can handle a small caliber rifle and they supplement their outdoor rifle practice with membership in shooting clubs which flourish throughout the land.

Now many cities have volunteer groups of experienced men teaching the youths to get utmost effectiveness out of military rifles. It is a valuable service to the country.

Infantry is still the backbone of the army and the infantryman is valuable in proportion to his ability to shoot straight. The man who goes into the army equipped with the skill of a marksman is well started on the way to becoming an effective soldier.

The man who expects to enter the army can spend the intervening time before his call to no better advantage than by taking advantage of the chance to improve his skill with the rifle. A situation may arise in which his life will depend on ability to shoot fast and to shoot straight.

Armies Make Friends

LETTERS from soldiers who have arrived overseas bear no date line but most of them have a paragraph which says: "The people here are very kind and hospitable."

The members of today's AEF have the good fortune to be among people who speak the same language and fraternizing is easier than it was for the men who went to Europe 25 years ago.

Fighting in a common cause, our soldiers are at once comrades of the people with whom they are now quartered, whether it be in Australia or in England. This association makes for firm and close ties. It also brings some surprises.

Coming from common stock and speaking the same tongue the soldiers and their hosts are likely to look upon each other immediately as brothers. It will be something of a shock to find that they are alien in many ways but when the first surprise is past it gives way to an understanding that will bring the nations closer together for the years which come after peace.

Sugar and Rubber

AMERICAN life has suffered so little disruption from the war that it makes us almost ashamed to talk about our little troubles which, thus far, have been only minor inconveniences.

Only important food product thus far rationed is sugar and here the outlook is good. Cuba and Puerto Rico have large stocks on hand and falling off in submarine operations in the Caribbean may increase shipments, supplies are arriving from Hawaii in amounts far beyond original estimates and the American crop of both beet and cane sugar reaches an all time peak.

Few families have failed to receive adequate sugar for their real needs, rationing has brought about equitable distribution and there is every prospect that we will continue to get enough for real needs.

The rubber outlook is alarming and one of the most important effects of Brazil's declaration of war might be its production of crude rubber, a possibility thus far overlooked in evaluating the effect of Brazil's action.

The valley of the Amazon is the home of the rubber plant and furnished the seedlings to start the industry in the far east. Millions of wild rubber trees still grow there but the region is remote, difficult of access and peopled by natives who will work only enough to satisfy their primitive needs.

It may come about that a major result of Brazil's declaration of war will be the development of these great areas of virgin rubber, most critically needed of all the war materials since the world's greatest sources fell into the hands of the enemy.

Victory Gardens

THIS is the type of year that shows how much victory is in the victory gardens planted so enthusiastically last May.

It was fun then, for the spring gives most people the urge to get out and dig in the ground. Summer heat dispels much of that enthusiasm like dew before the August sun.

Properly attended, the victory garden is now yielding most of the fruits of earlier labor. If it is clean and cultivated, if the bugs have been fought to a standstill, if the vegetables have been gathered at the right time, the garden is still paying returns on the investment of labor.

That, however, is not the final test. If you have the real, born in the blood gardening spirit, the early crops have been harvested and their places planted with new ones for late bearing. If you have neat, weedless rows of new things coming on during this season when early fall is as kind to them as late spring, then you have, in truth, the innate instincts of a victory gardener.

News Behind the News

Senator Maybank's Cose Call in North Carolina Worries Politicos.

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31 — A sudden run down congressional and executive political spines here when Senator Maybank squeezed through for renomination in South Carolina by something like 5,500 votes out of more than a quarter of a million cast.

The name Maybank may not mean much to people outside the south, because the senator has not been long in the national picture, but in South Carolina it stands for the most formidable Democratic power in the state — and there are no Republicans.

Mr. Maybank is close enough to Mr. Roosevelt to have his children use the White House pool as their swimming hole, and he has been the leader of the state since Sen. Byrnes went up to the supreme bench.

His friends, in advance, figured the primary as a runaway, particularly as he was facing only 65-year-old Eugene Blease (half-brother of the late fiery Sen. Cole Blease) who advanced no particularly hot political issue, at least not in his speeches. But when the votes were counted Sen. Maybank had lost just about everything in the state except in his home town, Charleston, where his majority was sufficient to overcome his deficiencies elsewhere.

In the political cloakrooms here it is confidently believed there were only two issues involved in Sen. Maybank's hairbreadth escape, neither of which can be discerned very clearly anywhere on paper:

(1) gasoline rationing, and (2) white supremacy.

The near-absence of these issues from the public record of the primary debate does not, however, lessen the effect which the South Carolina results may have on national politics, and national gas rationing.

Maybank was not particularly identified with gas rationing. He had not voted for any bill to that effect, because there has been no legislation on that particular subject. The regulation is directed by executive order.

Furthermore, Mr. Maybank took pains to point out everywhere on the stump that he had protested to Leon Henderson, the gas regulator, against the restrictions on traveling salesman and on business men, which were hindering or ruining their business.

Open Dissatisfaction

But the people all could see a pipe line running right through their state into North Carolina, and made no secret of their dissatisfaction with the existing administration. The business executives association, in the upper part of the state, particularly protested.

Mr. Maybank's opposition candidate made no point of this situation, but on the second issue—the question of white supremacy—Mr. Blease did once or twice indicate that, if elected, he would vote for Mr. Roosevelt's policies on every question except that one. He did not need to say much.

During the campaign Mrs. Roosevelt came into the adjoining state of North Carolina, to Salisbury, to address the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church of America. Many leaders in the town tried to devise polite ways to keep her out, fearing her presence might reopen some recent inter-racial scratches over the demand of Negro boy scouts to march in a Fourth of July parade with white Boy Scouts.

In the end, however, some of the ladies of the town received her, took her to inspect a non-union hosiery mill (where she said in her column later that excellent working conditions prevailed) and she made an address asking "equal opportunity" in war work for equal qualifiers.

This attracted little attention in North Carolina, but it got plenty in South Carolina, Maybank, of course, had nothing to do with it, except that he is a good friend of Mrs. Roosevelt.

War Workers' Reaction

In congressional quarters, South Carolinians have said the situation was further heightened by men and women war workers, who returned to the state after brief experience working in government departments, where equal opportunity has been provided Negroes.

The primary result showed two lessons irrefutably. The current method of gasoline rationing has not yet been justified in South Carolina, and unless it is justified—by Interior Secretary Ickes, for example, removing his censorship over supplies in the east, or by the government publicizing the needs of the armed services, or by trying to help business people who are suffering from it—political repercussions elsewhere can hardly be avoided.

It shows, without question, also, that whoever wants to thresh out age-old racial problems now is not doing the war unity program any good, or helping the administration in the south.

G. O. P. Strength

The California results, when coupled with New York, also caused nearly as great a commotion among the politicos here. The Republicans are likely to win those two of the most powerful political states in the union this coming November.

They already have Republican governors in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Massachusetts, and therefore the acquisition of New York and California would give them a top hand in practically all the most powerful states, except Michigan and New Jersey.

Their leaders are not now claiming that they can win a majority in the house of representatives, but events so far certainly indicate the strength of the New Deal element in next house will be shorn further.

Both the California and New York situations jointly reflected a turn in the tide of radicalism. California particularly has been wild and wooly and all the rest of it in recent years, even to the point where "thirty dollars every Thursday" became popular there.

A new national trend may possibly be in the making.

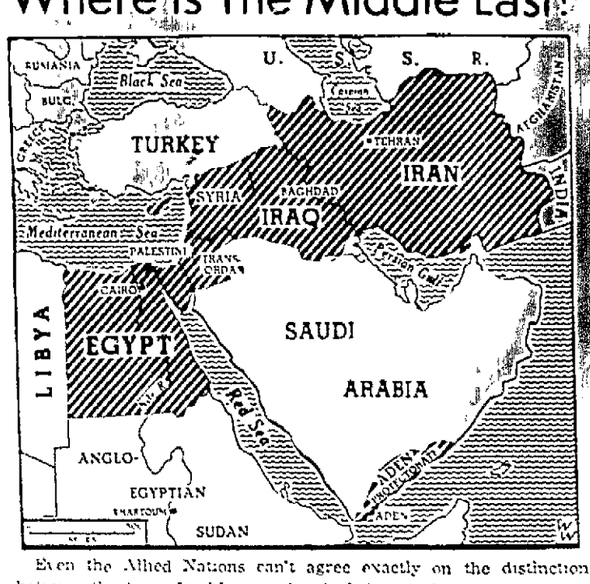
Where Is The Middle East?



Even the Allied Nations can't agree exactly on the distinction between the two. In this map the shaded area shows the territory defined as the Middle East by the British War Office.

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
Wide World War Analyst

JUST what sort of geographical picture hits your mind's eye when you encounter the terms "Middle East" and "Near East" which appear so often in these war days?

Since you are a truthful person your answer likely is that the expressions strike you as being very like the traditional boarding-house hash—of very uncertain composition—since that describes them very exactly. Not even in chancelleries the world around is there much unanimity in defining these localities.

In an effort to pin the thing down I recently made inquiries in both Washington and London. The result was what Schnozzle Durante might call colossal, amazing and staggering.

One state department uses only one descriptive term for the two areas. It has a division of Near Eastern Affairs in charge of the whole area from Greece to Afghanistan, inclusive. The U. S. War office has no official classification for the territories. Officers handling the department's war communiques say they prefer to think of Egypt and Libya as North Africa, and the Middle East as comprising Iran, Iraq, Asiatic Turkey and territory cut off by a line drawn from about where Asiatic Turkey begins to the east of Palestine and Syria, leaving Syria and Palestine for the Near East.

The British Foreign Office has no fixed division of Middle East and Near East. Generally Egypt, Palestine, Trans-Jordan, Iraq, Arabia, Syria, Turkey and Greece are considered as in the Near East. The Middle East comprises Iran, Afghanistan and India.

The British War Office doesn't acknowledge the existence of a Near East region militarily. It includes, in its Middle East command, Egypt, Aden, Palestine, Trans-Jordan, Syria, Iraq and Iran.

Since the whole area falls within the British sphere of influence, and as references to the zone almost invariably are in the military sense, it strikes me that the British War Office definition is perhaps the most useful of the lot for the time being. Probably it is the one we see most often in print.

ONE MORE RIVER TO CROSS

From News of Other Years

TEN YEARS AGO

It was Wednesday, Aug. 31, 1932.

An eclipse of the sun was visible over a large section of the United States. In Marion the sky was clear and the spectacle was viewed through smoked glasses by thousands. Here the eclipse reached 87 per cent of total at 2:14 p. m.

A promise of showers aroused hopes that a heat wave which had gripped this locality for several days would break. At noon the temperature stood at 94.

Announcement was made that the Grand Prairie juvenile grange had won first honors in juvenile grange exhibits at the state fair for the second consecutive year. Matron of the grange was Mrs. R. T. Thew.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Katz of Park boulevard returned from a visit to Trenton, N. J., and Philadelphia, Pa. and vicinity. On Aug. 23 they celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary at a family dinner at "The Farm," near Phoenixville, Pa., home of their son, Dr. G. Henry Katz.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

It was Thursday, Aug. 31, 1922.

Under pressure from France the inter-Allied reparations commission rejected Germany's request for an indemnity moratorium, this creating a new European crisis. The French were preparing to occupy the Ruhr basin, Germany's rich coal area, to enforce indemnity payments.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Ralph E. Porterfield of Fries avenue.

Forty couples attended a dance at the Marion Country club. Music was by Jimmie Stewart's orchestra of Columbus.

Archie V. Williams, 31, died at his home on Curtis avenue.

The Marion polo team defeated the Delaware team 5-0 in a game at the Coliseum in Columbus. The Marion players were J. E. Phillips, Harry Ohls and Harry O. Lippincott.

This Week in the Sky

(Prepared especially for this page by the Hayden Planetarium of the American Museum of Natural History in New York City.)

* * *

THIS WEEK opens with the moon rapidly waning from the sky. Mercury is beginning to come up in the evening sky, but it is still too close to the sun to be visible. Rising shortly after midnight, Jupiter and Saturn rule the morning sky; their great brilliance makes it easy to pick them out of even the most star-studded field.

All told, there are 88 recognized constellations in the sky, 48 of which are in the northern hemisphere.

Quite a surprising number of southern constellations can be seen from anywhere in the United States; even the Southern Cross, itself, which appears on the flags of Australia and New Zealand, can be spotted in Florida.

During this week, when the evening sky is not complicated with planets, it is an unusually good time to take a sky map out-of-doors and add a constellation or two to the list which you can recognize. Some out-of-the-way ones now visible are Sagitta, Triangulum, Delphinus (Job's Coffin), and the small group, Gloria Fredrika. Any good sky chart will show where they can be found.

Mail Call With Clippings

From "Force," Soldiers' Newspaper at Curacao.

This article, which appeared in a recent issue of Force, daily mimeographed newspaper issued for the troops at Curacao, Netherlands West Indies, was written by Cpl. Harold Cohen, former employe of the Newark, O. Advocate. It deals with the subject of promotions in the army ranks and the system which makes higher ratings come slowly for men in established units, while others not attached to such units often get advancements after but a comparatively short time in the service. It emphasizes the fact that failure to get promotion does not necessarily signify that a soldier is lacking in qualifications but may be a consequence of the soldier's location. Above all, it points out that service to help win the war is the primary purpose of every good soldier, who places little or no importance on promotions or ratings. The Private Jack Richards named in the article is, of course, a fictitional character.

* * *

PVT. JACK RICHARDS eagerly tore open the letter he had just received in the infrequent yet welcome mail call. There was a letter from home. Mother was writing all the news, bits of hope and prayers and did he get the package she had sent over a month ago. Was he feeling well, getting enough to eat and enclosed were some clippings from the newspapers about his friends. A load was lifted from Jack's mind as he learned that everyone was well and that things were fine at home. But, those "clippings!"

There was a letter from his girl. Jack curled up on his bunk and turning a deaf ear to everyone from the C. O. to the sergeant, lost himself in a stream of adjectives over lovely parties with Sam Brown belts and chevron-covered sleeves and when was he going to become a corporal, anyway? Why is it that he can't be a lieutenant when Johnny Jones who is younger and not nearly so good looking nor intelligent got a commission very soon after he was drafted. And there were some more clippings in this letter.

JACK had been one of the first to go, long before war had been declared, and the clippings he was now reading while on foreign soil were stories about his friends who were on furloughs, had been promoted to non-coms or had received their bars. Jack was bewildered as he sought that answer which was one the public seemed to be overlooking. This was not a war for personal achievement. This was a war that had to be won and the way was going to be terrible and hard. This was a war in which every man had an important job to do and ratings were not important when the steel had to be fired at the enemy. When the going got tough it would be the private with his trigger finger on the B. A. R. or the rifleman with his bayonet unsheathed who would be the man to win this war.

There was no way to explain this all to his girl. Mother might wonder but she was still "Mom," and everything was all right with her but why couldn't they all understand that he was in an established unit, already organized with a job to do and he was doing his part as best he could each day. There was no way to answer their queries so Jack dejectedly started to write his girl a letter.

Darling:

Received your swell letter and clippings. Am glad you are well and having such a grand time. As far as my becoming a corporal, well, ... CENSORED ..

Love,
JACK.

CHAPTER 17

Haunted Land

THEY talked little, saving their energies for the physical effort required to keep going. Their progress settled into a routine that became automatic — striking camp at dawn, changing leaders at regular intervals, halting for a brief respite in the hottest part of the day, selecting the next camp site, going about the evening chores, crawling into tents and the slumber of utter exhaustion.

Since most of the time they followed the lower levels they seldom caught a glimpse of the plateau, and after a while the feeling grew upon Sandy that Time had, in some unaccountable fashion, swung back and they were wandering aimlessly in a geologic age before man's coming upon earth. He would not have been surprised if a Paleozoic three-eyed crocodile had slithered up out of the water, or a dinosaur had crashed through the bush.

Suddenly, one day, without any previous warning, they came to the foot of the plateau. It was higher than it had appeared to be from a distance. Sandy stood gazing up at the unscalable height above him and wondered how they were to find a way to the top.

"There is a fault line somewhere nearby," Tyra said. She added, looking up at the plateau: "It's been two months since I left Dad with our other Yaqui. I hope nothing has happened to them."

"Did you expect your father to meet you here?" Sandy asked her.

She shook her head. "It would be practically impossible since he doesn't know just when I'm coming."

"He's probably worried about you, too," Sandy said. "I'll bet he has been out to the edge of the plateau with his field glasses every day for weeks trying to get a glimpse of you."

All the next day they worked around the base of the precipice and, late in the afternoon, reached a cave hung with glistening stalactites which drew exclamations of wonder from Sandy's party. Tyra told them the cave marked the foot of the fault-line, so they pitched camp in the mouth and began the climb early the following morning. It was tedious work, made more grueling by their impatience to be at the end of the journey. They were hardened to the rigors of the country now, however, and kept going steadily over the huge boulders that clogged the rift in the rocks.

Then, at last, with a final effort they stood upon level ground.

Near The End

Sandy breathed deeply of the higher air. He faced a dark wall of jungle, much like some they had already crossed. Butterflies and birds flitted through the dense foliage, and orchids filled the air with fragrance.

"Which way now?" he asked Tyra, for it all looked alike.

"A game trail leads to the ruins. Our camp isn't far from the Mayan city."

After casting about for a short time Tyra found the trail, and they started forward once more.

"One more river to cross," Gil called it.

It was a heavy jungle, even for Chiapas bush country. The machetes slashed away at the creepers, for even a game trail was clogged with vines. Then, quite suddenly, the heavy undergrowth fell away and they found themselves walking into a cathedral-like forest of great trees that interlaced overhead like a canopy. So thick was the green roof that only a stray beam of sun filtered through here and there.

Advancing slowly Sandy became conscious of a quality of vast age in the scene. Those hardwoods that towered so high into the tropical sky were only part of it. The air itself exuded antiquity, with a rotting-fungus pungency that made the nostrils quiver. The earth had the appearance of being trodden by the feet of a hundred millenniums of living creatures.

And, whether it came from this quality of age or not, Sandy had the eerie feeling that they were not walking alone through the gloomy aisles, but that shapes and forms unseen by human eyes were moving about stealthily upon errands of their own. The feeling was so strong that he brought the whole party to a halt and cautioned them to listen.

"Maybe you hear sounds from our camp. It isn't far now," Tyra said.

But Gil burst out, "Good God Chief, you don't suppose the place is haunted, do you?"

"Not unless you believe Mayan ghosts come back to walk among the scenes of their lifetime, after several hundred years."

Tyra spoke suddenly. "There can't be anything here to be afraid of, for Dad and I have been camped here a long time. But there is something strange about the place."

"Anyhow," Sandy observed "In spite of the evil reputation of the Forbidden Land, we've come through without casualties. What we've done, others can do."

"Maybe we should save the laurels until we're out of here, Chief," Gil reminded Sandy dryly.

They all laughed, then, and moved on.

In a few minutes they saw a group of huts beside a clear, running stream. Tyra hallooed, and a powerfully-built man, dressed in shorts, strode out.

Tyra ran forward and flung herself into his arms.

When Tyra's father put her aside he inquired brusquely, "Who are these people?"

His eyes, keen as whitted blades, went over the strangers. Tyra presented them by name and added that they were an archeological party interested in the ruins.

That information did not appear to reassure Mr. Fleming. He addressed Sandy in clipped tones: "Want to explore the ruins, do you? Did my daughter lead you here?"

Tyra answered hastily, "Yes, Dad. I'll tell you all about it, later."

Mr. Fleming continued to examine the strangers and their equipment.

"Where do you plan to make camp?"

"We haven't looked around," Sandy said. "Maybe you could point out a good spot, Mr. Fleming."

He jerked his head toward the opposite bank of the stream. "Better go over there. We can't be too close together. We'd get in each other's way."

Since it was scarcely possible for less than a dozen persons to create a serious traffic hazard, this statement had a bizarre effect upon Sandy. But he grinned with good nature.

"Looks all right. And we haven't much time if we want to be settled by nightfall."

Mr. Fleming agreed with almost too much alacrity. "It's gets dark as hades under these trees."

Sandy felt the necessity of making some farewell gesture to Tyra. He thrust out his hand awkwardly. "You've kept your word to the letter, Tyra. We're all grateful."

She appeared to find the moment difficult, too. Her eyes dropped before his gaze. "I hope you find what you're looking for."

Sandy addressed both of them. "We'll see more of you people, of course."

Mr. Fleming answered, "No doubt."

Sandy, Gil and Helen turned away, then. When they had gone a few steps, Sandy glanced back. Tyra and her father had not moved, but stood watching them.

U. S. INDICTS FIRED WPB AIDS

Three Dealers in Used Machine Tools Also Named in Federal Charges.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31—The justice department announced today the indictment by a federal grand jury here of two dismissed WPB officials and three dealers in used machine tools on charges of conspiracy to defraud the United States and interfere with prosecution of the war.

The former war production board officials named in the indictments were Robert B. Rhoads of Indianapolis, and Ralph L. Glaser, of New Haven, Conn.

The three dealers of used machine tools named were Louis E. Emerman of Chicago, and Frank L. O'Brien Jr., and Clarence J. O'Brien of Philadelphia.

The prosecution was requested by WPB Chief Donald M. Nelson and John Lord O'Brian, general counsel for WPB.

The conspiracy indictments charged that Rhoads and Glaser, who served as chief and assistant chief, respectively, of the available used tools section of the tool branch of WPB from January of this year until their dismissal Aug. 4, conspired with Emerman, a Chicago machine tool dealer, and the two O'Briens, to prevent critical required machine tools from being allocated to war contractors.

Rhoads and Glaser also are charged with selling, at a profit of $30,000 to themselves, an option on machine tools they received from Emerman.

The government charges that the conspiracy was entered into at a hotel in Washington, at a dinner in Emerman's suite, on May 19, attended by Rhoads and Glaser.

Rhoads was president of the Gates Marble and Tile Co., of Indianapolis, from 1926 to 1941. Glaser was employed by various used machine tool companies until May, 1940, when he was hired by the British purchasing commission as a technical adviser in the procurement of used machine tools.

Clarence O'Brien is a partner of Frank L. O'Brien Sr., who is not named in the indictment, in the O'Brien machinery company of Philadelphia, the justice department said. His nephew, Frank L. O'Brien Jr., is associated with the same firm.

Miss Huntington, Jack Stephenson Wed at Evanston

THE wedding of Miss Katherine Huntington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Huntington of Columbus, and Jack Warren Stephenson, son of Dr. and Mrs. O. G. Stephenson of 488 South Vine street, took place Saturday at Evanston, Ill.

The ceremony was read by Dr. Harry Cotton, former pastor of Broad street Presbyterian church in Columbus and now president of the Presbyterian Theological Seminary in Chicago, at 4:30 p. m. in Howes Memorial Chapel before an altar banked with green huckleberry branches and white gladioli.

The bride wore a white satin gown with pleating outlining the sweetheart neckline, running down the bodice and encircling the waistline. The sleeves, broad at the shoulder, were tight from elbow to wrist, ending in points over the hands. The skirt terminated in a long train. The veil of rose point lace extended over the train of the dress.

She wore a gown of pale green faille silk, fashioned similarly to the bridal gown except that the sleeves were bracelet length. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Jack Graf of Columbus was best man for Mr. Stephenson.

BRANBURGERS ...Broil them over the campfire, then call for more.

BRANBURGERS (8 Cakes)

1 egg, 1½ teaspoons salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 2 tablespoons minced onions, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, 1½ cups milk, 1 cup bran, 1 pound ground beef, 8 slices bacon.

Beat egg, add salt, pepper, onion, parsley, milk and bran. Let soak until most of mixture is taken up. Add beef and mix thoroughly. Cut slices of bacon lengthwise into thin strips. Mold meat mixture into 8 patties, wrapping two strips of bacon around each one, fastening with toothpick. Cook ten minutes in frying pan over camp fire.

What better way to celebrate Labor Day than a family or neighborhood picnic? Eating out of doors is always fun, appetite-sharpening and nerve-resting in these days of war work tensions.

America's picnic fans are undaunted by travel restrictions. They are finding their own backyards and nearby parks fine picnic spots. Many hike or go by bike and a few can put their lunch baskets into the buggy hitched to old Dobbin.

One main hot dish is enough for this meal. It should be piping hot and plentiful. Lamb or beef stew, fish or vegetable chowder or escalloped dishes can be started at home and then finished over the camp fire. Chops, steaks or any member of the burger family can be cooked on the spot.

To prevent scorching, reheat vegetables and creamed potatoes in a double boiler set on the grill or placed on the camp stove. To help with the cleaning up and remove soot from cooking utensils, carry along some old newspapers. A pair of heavy canvas gloves will save burned fingers.

A shaker filled with seasoning blends gives extra pep to cooked or cold meat, mashed brown potatoes or roasting ears. Mix together in a large shaker salt, pepper, savory seasoning powder and chili powder, or any other blend you like.

For a new frank version try creole frankfurters. They are thrifty, filling and tasty. Place 15 or so franks in a shallow pan, add 2½ cups canned condensed tomato soup. Cover and heat slowly for 15 minutes. Turn the franks several times with a fork. Slip the franks into buttered plain or toasted buns or spear each with a long pointed stick and eat "as is."

Steakbobs are a real he-man food. Cut well tenderized beef steak (round, flank or other economy cut) into inch squares. The steak should be about ½ inch thick. Spear the meat squares on wooden sticks or skewers, alternating with thin onion slices. Allow about 5 meat squares per portion. Dip into barbecue sauce and broil over glowing fire. For extra flavor give each boob 2 more barbecue dips during the cooking period.

Rocky Mountain Barbecue Sauce gives just the needed zip to steaks, chops, chicken and other meats cooked in the open. It will keep several days stored, covered, in the refrigerator, so any left over can be well used on kitchen-cooked meats, fish or fowl. Mix ½ cup butter, 1 1-3 cups boiling water, 2 tablespoons vinegar, 1-3 cup catsup, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-3 teaspoon pepper, 2 teaspoons chopped onion, 2 teaspoon chili powder and 1 tea sugar. Simmer, covered, 10 utes. Cool, take to the p covered jar and reheat needed. For extra flavor a of garlic can be simmered the sauce and then discard.

Roasting Ears are great picnics when most of the f cooked out of doors. Select corn and pull back the from each ear to inspect ear for worms. Then replace husks, pulling well over t of each ear of corn. So minutes in cold water. P grill or stove and cook 15 minutes. Turn several time long handled forks or s Serve piping hot and drena melted butter.

Present for the ceremony were Mr. and Mrs. James Tanner, Mrs. John Tanner and Mrs. Ray Tanner. The couple left following the ceremony on a wedding trip to Battle Creek, Mich. They will live at 280 Breen street. Mr. Hitt is employed with the CCC highway.

Here's what he's doing...

And here's what you can do to help him!

When his basic training's over and he's sent to fight the hard-hitting Nazis and Japs, you want him to have the finest fighting equipment a man ever had—and plenty of it.

You—yes, you—can help him get it . . . by putting every dime and dollar you can into War Savings Bonds—at least 10 percent of your pay every pay day!

So take a look around. You could save more, couldn't you—for him—if you took the bus to work or shop instead of the car?—if you didn't go for a drive on Sundays?—if you didn't buy that "extra something"?—if you cut some useless spending here and some more there. Sure you could.

And just think! Those extra dimes and dollars put into War Savings Bonds might end the war sooner, bring him home safe and sound a day, a week, a month sooner than if you didn't save those dimes and dollars.

When you think of it that way, it makes you want to go out right now, doesn't it, and bring home the biggest Bond they've got at the bank or at the Post Office? Well, why not? There's nothing you could do that would help your boy more!

Admiral Spends Night at Home of Brother

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, Aug. 31—Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of naval operations, ate bacon and eggs at the home of his brother here today after spending the night in the spare room—unguarded.

"That's the way Ernie wanted it," said the admiral's sister-in-law, Mrs. Norman King, with a laugh. "I thought how the British had sent 50 men to capture General Rommel and wondered how our house would stand something like that."

The Cleveland Kings live upstairs in a double house. The William T. Jack family, which lives downstairs, flew a flag in the admiral's honor, and that was the only sign in the neighborhood that the United States' top admiral was there.

U. S. Army in Britain Far Ahead of '17 Doughboys

Troops Look Better and Are Better Equipped, American and English Observers Declare.

By RUSSELL LANDSTROM
WITH THE UNITED STATES FORCES IN BRITAIN, Aug. 31—(Wide World) — The soft-voiced American colonel of engineers looked over a good-sized chunk of United States equipment in Great Britain and remarked "we're so far ahead of what we were in 1917 there's no comparison," and that's what a lot of people in this country are thinking today.

From Whitey, a mongrel dog brought overseas in a barracks-bag to mascot for an infantry battalion, to the most impressive gold-braid, the second AEF to Europe looks far better than the first.

It is generally agreed that the American soldier of 1942 is better educated, more physically fit and better trained than was the doughboy of 1917-18.

Better Dressed, Too

Moreover, he certainly is more personable.

Many a soldier from the states arrived here in the last war wearing an ill-fitting uniform—a uniform which never was any great shakes even when it was the right size — with bulky equipment clanging about him. Possibly he even wore one of those old-fashioned campaign hats, with the wide brim and the dents in the crown.

The American soldier in Britain now invariably is a well-appearing fellow. He received a good uniform before he left home, and he keeps it clean and pressed.

Those who have witnessed or participated in the arrival of two American expeditionary forces in Great Britain also have noted a contrast, often decidedly pronounced, in the reception of the troops.

When United States soldiers came over in the last war, they were roundely cheered by the English, who gave the newcomers many of the good things they had. It is rather the other way 'round this time. Rationing being what it is, the United States soldier is more likely to share with the British his own good things, instead of accepting the proffered largesse from the people of this country.

Get Better Reception

Several United States army officers said they believed the British were more hospitable to Americans than they were 25 years ago, and that American soldiers generally were getting along better with the British than did their predecessors.

A colonel cited "a good example:"

"I just got a letter from a prominent woman asking if she might entertain a group of American officers at dinner. They just didn't do that sort of thing here before."

Realistic and shrewdly observant non-commissioned officers commented, too. Said a sergeant of infantry with 24 years army experience:

"They can talk all they want to about the older soldiers—these kids are good. They're fit and they're eager. I think they've got an edge on us veterans—as we were 25 years ago."

Known from the home cantonments to the western front, in the last war, as a choleric, misanthropic "belly-robber," and still something less than persona grata among enlisted men, the mess sergeant got his word in:

"Everything's better now. The food, clothes, equipment, all the living conditions.

Always Some Gripes

"Sure there's grumbling, but that's the army. The trouble is that the boys have been used to too much comfort; they can't get used to going without the things that are luxuries or that can't be got at all over here.

"Even if they could get those things, I suppose a lot of 'em would beef anyway. Give them good raisin pie, in the hope of lifting their spirits, and what happens? They yell 'where are the steaks?' At home they'd probably be satisfied with doughnuts and coffee for breakfast; now they want bacon and eggs and the whole damned works."

And now, let a soldier in the ranks speak:

"If we go on getting fed this well and if the people here don't get fed up with us, we'll have no gripe coming. As for extra chow, let them send over guns and ammunition, not food that we can get along without. After all, the British have been getting along on this food—and much worse.

"I like the British because they mind their own business. Why should anyone think we'd have to be coddled? Are we a bunch of campfire girls?"

Outlook Brighter As Allies Begin New Week of War

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
Wide World War Analyst

Allies, Inc., took down their shutters for business this Monday morning with prospects not quite so blue as usual, which is a cautiously back-handed way of recording that things looked a bit brighter—and this was true both in the crucial European theater and in the Orient.

Not that there had been any big swing of fortune, but there were signs that the axis powers were beginning to feel the strain of the fierce pace they've been maintaining in their effort to achieve victory this year. Before the allied striking power becomes too great. Into this picture, of course fits the steadily growing strength of the United Nations.

Now please don't misunderstand me. The enemy is not on the point of breaking up, or anything of the sort. Our dangers are terribly great in the face of Germany and Japan.

Still, the signs of strain undoubtedly are there. And that strain is the symptom which points to coming exhaustion.

Important Development

That to my mind is the most important development in this fierce race against time. The allies' hopes of winning without having to wage an interminable war of attrition depend largely on their ability to hold the master gangster on the Russian front during the few remaining weeks until winter comes to stall him. This means that much hangs on how long the Hitlerites can keep up the terrific speed they've shown thus far — a rate which couldn't be carried on indefinitely by any fighting machine.

Moscow reports a continuation of the remarkable hardening of the Red defense. The Bolshevists are holding on the vital southern front, while further up the line they actually are maintaining their smashing offensive against the Nazis northwest of the capital.

While this stiffening of Russian resistance is due in part to their own stout spirit, I believe we must attribute a good deal of the change to a natural weakening of the Nazi offensive.

Several things are working against the Nazis at this stage:

1. Their fighting forces increasingly are feeling the physical strain of this unprecedented offensive.

2. Their communications must be getting into a sad state, being greatly over-extended and their transport in the recently captured territory being dependent on war-torn highways and broken down railways which have the wide Russian gauge that doesn't fit any German rolling stock.

Their war industry at home is slipping, partly because of deterioration of machinery which can't be replaced, partly because of lack of skilled workers, and partly because of shortage of raw materials. We have fresh evidence of this in the known shortage of German warplanes, and a scarcity of gasoline which the Russians report is so bad as to have stalled a large number of tanks in one sector.

One Big Question

Has Hitler the strength to crush Russia before he himself collapses? That's the crux of the matter, and the indications are that he hasn't.

Out in the orient the Japs have been getting it from both the Americans and the Chinese in no uncertain manner. General MacArthur's headquarters announced the defeat of an enemy force which landed at Milne bay, strategic point on the southeastern point of New Guinea, uncomfortably close to the Australian mainland. We also have annihilated the Nipponese who tried to recapture the islands which we took in the Solomons recently. And three more enemy destroyers have been sunk or damaged by bombers.

On top of this the amazing Chinese, who just won't be beaten, are running riot in Kiangsi and Chekiang provinces in an offensive which has carried them steadily forward. A notable achievement has been the capture of Chuhsien, which has the largest airport in China and is within easy striking distance of Japan. Chinese possession of this field presages some moments of hell for Tokyo and other Japanese cities in days to come.

SENATE FIGHTS TAX PROPOSAL

Treasury Plan Headed for Hard Struggle on Legislative Floor.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31— A forthcoming treasury proposal for imposition of a stiff new tax on individual spending today appeared headed for a stormy reception in the senate finance committee.

Proponents of a retail sales tax served notice shortly afte. Chairman George (D-Ga.) had announced that the committee would receive the new treasury proposals Tuesday, that they did not like the levy which George outlined to reporters yesterday.

As explained by the chairman, a tax of possibly 10 per cent would be levied against all money spent by an individual over and above certain specified exemptions. George said treasury officials hoped such a levy, which would be in addition to regular income and other taxes, would yield between four and five billion dollars as well as check inflationary spending.

Calls It Vicious

Calling the proposed new tax "vicious" in some aspects, Senator Clark (D-Mo) said he felt it would be a good deal more objectionable than an outright retail sales tax, which he also has opposed.

Senator Herring (D-Iowa) who has been urging his colleagues to write a sales tax into the new revenue bill now pending before the committee, objected that a spending tax would reach only those who are liable for income tax.

"Because of the exemptions that would be granted," he told reporters, "the people who don't make income tax returns wouldn't be touched by it. It is my understanding that $36,000,000,000 in annual income now escapes taxes and that is where the inflation threat lies."

George, who disclosed the plan without endorsing or opposing it, said he did not believe the proposed new tax would affect persons with incomes of $1,000 or less annually.

As he explained it, the individual would be permitted to deduct from the amount of money he actually spent during the year exemptions such as those that are made for income tax purposes, plus certain other expenditures.

To Hike Rates

The treasury meanwhile was reported to have served notice on the finance committee that it would seek to increase social security taxes to a combined total of 5 per cent on employers and employees after work on the revenue bill is completed.

Estimating that a levy of this nature would yield $2,500,000,000 annually—an increase of approximately $1,500,000,000 over the present revenue from this source—Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) said he and others were prepared to offer vigorous opposition.

Law Catches Up As Young Auto Thieves Take Nap

Tired out after a night of driving, two 15-year-old Erie, Pa., boys parked their car on Route 4, south of Marion, yesterday morning and went to sleep.

Today Erie, Pa., authorities were coming to Marion to the juvenile detention home to return them to Erie on charges of driving a stolen car.

State patrolmen from the Marion sub-station, investigating the parked car, found the boys asleep. At first the boys said the car belonged to the father of one of them, but when the patrol checked the license with Pennsylvania authorities and found it was a stolen car the boys admitted that it didn't belong to them.

According to information received by the patrol, the car, property of Robert Terrill of Erie, Pa., was stolen Saturday night. The boys told the patrol they had no particular destination in mind, but were "just driving."

Other pilots participating in the practice were Squadron Commander A. A. Freeman of Marion, Squadron Executive Officer W. R. Reichenstein of Marion and William J. Traynor of Marysville, observer.

Flight Maneuvers

Flight maneuvers followed the bombing practice. All activities were under the direction of Commander Freeman. Orders of the day were issued by the commander through the squadron executive officer, Mr. Reichenstein.

Taking part in the formation flying were Pilot Mulberg and Observer MacAdam, Pilot Brooke and Observer Peters, and Pilot Freeman and Observer Traynor. Pilot Brooke was operations officer for the day.

During the bombing practice, planes took off at two minute intervals and climbed to 500 feet. Returning over the field, the pilots checked the field for being clear and nearing the target, the observers released the "bomb." After the bombing a three-plane formation flight was organized.

Henry Foote and Robert Richards, members of the Galion flight, had charge of measuring and spotting during the bombing contest. They were under the direction of Mr. Traynor, squadron staff officer.

Staff Officer J. H. Barnhart of Marion had charge of assigning airport patrolmen, traffic directors, emergency squad, hangar patrol and first aiders.

On Patrol Duty

Patroling the south boundary of the airport were Robert Phipps and Ray Haspelaugh of Galion and Earl Turner and Paul McCleary of Marion. Traffic directors were George Brown of Marion and William Emberton of Prospect. Emergency squad members were A. Keckler of Galion and C. E. Green of Prospect. Each emergency squad member was equipped with a fire extinguisher and a crow bar. First aiders were Dr. B. P. Mansfield and Sheldon B. Swank of Galion. Virgil Mason of Mt. Gilead was hangar patrolman.

Four of the Galion flight members flew to Marion, the others coming in automobiles.

Columbus Visitors

Five Civil Air Patrol airplanes from Columbus, flying in formation maneuvers, flew over the airport about 1 p. m. before landing for refueling. Herb Stump, Squadron Commander, Squadron 518-3 of Columbus, was flight leader of the group. He flew in from Springfield after a flight from Columbus to that city. Leaving Marion the flight headed for Findlay before flying back to Norton Field, Columbus, squadron base.

Flying the various ships were Pilot Stump and Observer Wally Chapin in a Piper J-3, Pilot E. H. Norris and Observer Robert Yeager in a Piper J-3, Pilot William Crawford and Observer John Lynn in an Aeronica, Pilot L. F. Bell, who flew solo, and Pilot Turvey with Observer H. Moxham in a Piper J-3.

PACIFIC

Backed by American airpower in growing might and widening range of operation, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's ground troops have carried China's fight deeper into enemy-held territory.

Each stride forward by the resurgent Chinese brings closer the day when the big bombers of the United States army air force will have secure bases within range of the enemy's home islands and Tokyo itself.

The Chinese high command announced that retreating Japanese forces have been pursued to the outskirts of Nanchang, which the invaders have held for more than two years and fitted out as their principal base in Kiangsi province.

Another City Retaken

In Chekiang province, meanwhile, Chinese reports said that Lungyu, 20 miles east of the great air base site of Chuhsien, had been retaken after a heavy night fight. Lanchi, 20 miles northwest of Lungyu and on the 450-mile Chekiang-Kiangsi railroad, also was reported back in Chinese possession.

Thus, the Chinese have recaptured almost 350 miles of the rail line and, pulling an important triumph out of what seemed to be grave peril, virtually have eradicated Japan's summer gains in Chekiang and Kiangsi.

Complementing this ground offensive, American bombers on three successive days smashed at key bases on opposite sides of Japan's front—twice in Burma, where the enemy threatens both India and China's interior, and once in French Indo-China, a marshalling point for enemy land, sea and air power in the Pacific.

Extensive damage was wrought on two Japanese bases in Indo-China Friday, a communique from Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters in Chungking announced.

At Lashio, junction of the railroad from Rangoon and the Burma road to Chungking, the communique said, fighter-escorted American bombers scored 32 hits in the airport area Saturday, "many hits" in the warehouse area and left fires burning in both.

Three Separate Attacks

At Myitkyina, in northern Burma, three separate attacks were made by United States bombers, American fighters and the RAF. One was announced by Gen Stilwell from Chungking and the others by Brig. Gen. Clayton Bissell, U. S. commander of air forces in India, Burma and China.

From all of these raids, every United States plane returned to its base.

Meanwhile, the United States marines sat tight in the Solomon islands, consolidating their hold and picking off the last remnants of resistance on the islands where the Japanese have felt the power of the first American offensive and tasted probably their most disastrous reverse so far.

Now that the struggle is past its peak and Japan's heaviest counter-punches are feeble air and submarine attacks on the leathernecks ashore, details of the struggle are becoming public.

Unemployment Claims Will Be Reexamined

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 31—The Ohio bureau of unemployment compensation and the U. S. employment service opened a four-city study today to learn why able-bodied men and women are drawing checks instead of working regularly at a time when industrial employment is unusually heavy.

BUC Administrator Herschel C. Atkinson and Wade Hammond, unemployment service director, said they believed the answer lay in a lag between construction workers' jobs and the inability of elderly persons to get new jobs immediately, but that they would survey four key war industry centers—Akron, Dayton, Warren and Sandusky—to make certain of their deductions.

Each person who presents a claim for compensation in the four cities will have his or her cause of unemployment reexamined and will be questioned as to outside efforts to get a job or to get training for war industry work.

SINKINGS

tering "vicissitudes" in Atlantic coastal waters.

2. American marine insurance underwriters cut cargo war risk rates on certain voyages by 5 per cent.

Sinkings announced last week included four American vessels, two British, one Norwegian, one Dutch and one Greek.

Sea warfare developments announced yesterday by the navy were the torpedoing of an American and a British cargo ship in the Caribbean, but the American ship was towed safely to port by a Canadian naval vessel and the British, her back broken, was finished off by another friendly naval craft.

LARRY ALLEN

Henry H. Harwood, commander in chief of the British Mediterranean fleet, swished toward the destroyer across the blue harbor waters and the lieutenant commander reported by megaphone that the ship's casualties were slight.

"Well done, you all," the admiral said.

(The German high command said yesterday that a British destroyer had been badly damaged by bombs off El Daba and that 12 British planes were shot down.)

Naval aircraft spotters reported that the shelling of the El Daba concentration, one of the most important bases for repair and equipping of Rommel's tanks and an advanced supply center for the entire army, exceeded expectations.

SOLOMON CHIEF

Col. Leroy P. Hunt (above), 50, of Kinston, N. C., commanded combat group A, which was the first to land on Guadalcanal, as U. S. marines wrested Solomon Island bases from the Japanese. Before the attack Col. Hunt told his men: "Our country expects nothing but victory from us, and it will have just that."

RUSSIA

Moscow, saw Russian troops meeting United States tanks into battle and four things were apparent:

1. Even the exhausting summer battles have left the army strong enough to mount offensive on a limited front.

2. American equipment, tried and proved in action, now a regular part of the Russian arsenal.

3. Germany's defense line, built and strengthened west of Moscow in the past seven months, is formidable to mass attack.

4. The autumn rains have arrived as the advance herald of another Russian winter.

Nazi Cities Bombed

Keeping up another show of strength where the Germans expected to find it, Russian airmen cut a path of explosions and fire across eastern Germany yesterday night from Baltic ports Koenigsberg, in East Prussia, Stettin, and Danzig to Berlin itself.

Swedish reports said the Swedish capital was under air alarm for three hours.

Unsuitable flying weather temporarily halted the air blows which the RAF's great night bombers in what rapidly has developed as an overlapping, double-barreled aerial war against Germany capable of carrying sudden destruction to the remotest corners of the Nazi fatherland.

A spurt of allied sea and air assaults on the axis ashore and afloat in the Mediterranean theater underlined the approach of day when rested, reinforced and refueled legions on both sides will come to grips 80 miles west of Alexandria.

United States bombers struck effectively again today at Axis landing fields east of Matruh, at the waterfront of Tobruk.

British headquarters announced that RAF bombers and fighter planes set two axis supply ships afire, hit at least one other and left a tanker blazing from bow to stern in week-end aerial bombing of the enemy's Mediterranean supply lines.

Malta Under Attack

The defenses of Malta, which one British report said recently has spent 807 planes so far in the vain attempt to reduce the island stronghold, were described officially with adding 15 more planes, including nine bombers — shot down yesterday.

A swift raid by British warplanes last Friday on the tiny Mediterranean island of Antikythira, between Greece and Crete and long closed by the Italians, was revealed at least tacit confirmation by British sources.

The Italians said a small landing force had retreated before quick intervention of German defenses."

An authoritative British source in London said that such a landing—perhaps to destroy enemy installations—was "highly likely" and that it would never announced officially.

Suggestions To President on How To Speed up War Effort Come from Public

By GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., Aug. 31—All during the hectic days of the Civil War, Abraham Lincoln set aside a period each week during which he received anyone who wanted to see him.

There was a long procession of plain people, and Lincoln heard each one out. When a major in the War Department protested that this was inefficient, that the president was wasting his time, Lincoln replied:

"No hours of my day are better employed than those which bring me again within the direct contact and atmosphere of the average of our whole people . . . I call these receptions my public opinion baths . . . and the effect as a whole is renovating and invigorating."

The business of government is today vastly more complicated than it was during the days of Lincoln, but if President Roosevelt had time to call before him a representative group of all the people of the nation—farmers, laborers, businessmen, lawyers, professors, housewives—he would find that nearly four out of every five would have definite suggestions as to how the country could speed up its war effort. And, like Lincoln, he probably would be "invigorated" by the knowledge that people are eager to get on with the war.

Their suggestions would cover a multitude of subjects—war production, morale, inflation. Many would even advise President Roosevelt on military matters.

To get the people's ideas on how they would speed up the war effort, the Institute instructed its staff of field reporters to interview people in all walks of life, in every state of the union, on the following question:

"If you were the President, what would you do to speed up the war effort?"

Great Range in Responses

Statements made in response to this question range from suggestions for the immediate start of a second front to the killing of all politicians. But the suggestions which occur more frequently than any others reveal public anxiety over lagging war production.

Foremost in the public's mind when it thinks of production problems are strikes with their attendant evils. The public would put a stop to all strikes during wartime, would draft strikers in some cases, and would take over strike-ridden plants in others.

"Stop strikes in war industries." "Eliminate labor strife." "Eliminate labor strikes." "Do away with labor rackets." "Abolish strikes." These are some of the typical comments made to field reporters.

Second in importance in the mind of the public is the reorganization of the production setup, the giving of administrative posts to more capable persons, the increasing of efficiency, and the cutting of red tape."

"Take up Kaiser; "he's a production genius," said one man. "Let's, for goodness sake, get rid of the red tape!" a Williamsport, Pennsylvania, housewife exclaimed. "I would cut out all profit and skullduggery in connection with production and the war effort," declared a metal worker out in Idaho.

Fully half of the people who had suggestions to make had some aspect of the production problem on their minds.

Complacency Bothers Some

Next in frequency of mention by those questioned is the problem of complacency. Said one man, "We have got to impress the people here that they must make the same sacrifices our soldiers are making." Those concerned about public complacency urged that some kind of steps be taken immediately to open the people's eyes to the realities of this war, to make them realize that everybody is in it, and that everybody has to do his share, if we are going to win.

An equally large segment of the public was concerned with the obstacle of "politics-as-usual" in the national capital. These people would put a firm foot down on any activity not directly connected with the winning of the war. They would give short shrift to minority groups or legislators representing special groups or interests.

Total Mobilization

Back in February of this year, an Institute survey showed the American public in favor of total mobilization. Many of the country's voters expressed impatience that such a program has not yet been put into effect, and said that were they in the President's shoes, total mobilization of manpower would be their first act.

Another group suggested widespread rationing to conserve vital raw materials, while still others would close down immediately any and all non-essential industries until the war's end.

Mentioned with only a little less frequency than rationing were suggestions that the United States take more aggressive measures in its conduct of the war, including the opening of a second front on the European continent now.

Inflation Suggestions

The problems attendant upon inflation were uppermost in the minds of some, who suggested steps to clamp a tight lid on rising living costs. One laborer from Hollister, California, summed it up cryptically when he said, "Put a ceiling on wages and everything else."

Still other mentioned suggestions were for a unified command, for concentration on one war front, for complete government control of business, for speeding up the sales of war bonds, for building cargo planes, and for putting increasing numbers of women into war industries.

RECRUITING CAMPAIGN

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Aug. 31—State highway department division offices now are receiving applications for enlistment of men in an all-Ohio ordnance company to operate in war combat areas, Highway Director Hal G. Sours announced. It will be captained by Paul E. Boyer of Anna, equipment superintendent in division seven.

Marion Hospital Record Set

$1 Patients Set All-Time High; Bassinets Improvised from Dresser Drawers.

Marion City hospital's critical housing situation reached a new high today with 81 patients, including 13 babies, receiving care. The previous high census was 79. Contriving bassinets out of dresser drawers, Mrs. Mary J. Taylor, superintendent and her staff managed to take care of the babies which arrived yesterday and for which no regular bassinets were available. By doubling up in private rooms, accommodations for the patients were made available. The pressure will be relieved when some patients are released, Mrs. Taylor said. Some mothers and babies have been in the hospital for 12 days. Supplies of linens for the babies were plentiful until a mishap occurred in the laundry. A local laundry is now helping out with that problem, with the city furnishing the trucks for transportation.

More nurses' aids were called in to help the 28 nurses care for the overflow. A new obstetrical nurse, Miss Bonnivere Burns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Burns of East Church street, a recent graduate of St. Luke's hospital, Cleveland, will be added to the staff tomorrow.

CHURCH BENEFIT ASSISTS CANTEEN

Proceeds of Drama Put in Service Men's Fund.

Ray Feaver portrayed the character of "The Man" in the presentation of "The Forgotten Man" by members of the Christian Young People's Unity at Trinity Baptist church last night for the benefit of the Marion canteen. The offering amounted to over $50.

The play, with a cast of seven persons was centered around the efforts of a young minister to find a home for a little child who had come into his care. The problem was solved when "the Man" who represented the "spirit of God" in the form of a wandering tramp radiating God-like love and understanding revealed who should be the foster parents. Little Kay May played the part of the child and Tom Stinchcomb the minister. Others in the cast were Robert Barnhart, Mary Queen, Doris Pennington and John Bryant. Miss Eloise Coffman directed the play, Bernard Brooks was production manager, James Hill was in charge of lighting and Ray Feaver, make-up.

Three-Day Marion Co. Fair Harness Racing Program To Open Wednesday

Two-Year-Old Trotting and Pacing Events Feature Inaugural Race Card.

By LOREN W. TIBBALS
Marion Star Sports Editor

THE vanguard of 150 or more of the nation's foremost trotting and pacing harness horses arrived here over the week-end for the three-day Marion county fair race program opening Wednesday afternoon at the county fairgrounds.

A count of noses this morning revealed more than 100 horses already are on hand. Late arrivals later today and Tuesday will boost to 150 the number of racing horses at the fairgrounds, Frank M. Foster, speed secretary, said.

Stall facilities at the fairground, which normally accommodate around 175 horses, will receive the greatest test in the history of the county fair. This year, in addition to the usual harness racing program and draft horse exhibits, a horse show will be held for the first time. About 85 horses have been entered in the show which will be held Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

Add Stall Space

Workmen today were completing erection of two large tents which will accommodate at the most only 50 horses. If necessary additional tents will be put up in the infield and also to the north of the track, fair board officials said.

Among the first to arrive for the three-day meet were the horses to be raced by Harry Short of Columbus and Curley Smart of Delaware, both Grand Circuit campaigners. Smart will drive horses owned by Joe Neville, widely - known Delaware sportsman.

Lee Smith of Pinehurst, N. C., who drove Bill Gallon to a Hambletonian victory in 1941, arrived yesterday with a bright string. His leading contender will be Pay Up, a heat winner in this year's Hambletonian classic.

Many of the drivers who appeared here during the spring Little Grand Circuit meeting were also among the early arrivals.

Here is the complete daily program:

Wednesday — 2-year-old trot (closed) $600; 2-year-old pace (closed) $600; 24 trot (closed) $600.

Thursday — 15 pace Chamber of Commerce pacing derby (closed). $1,000; 3-year-old trot, The Ohio (closed) $1,000; 23 pace (closed) $600; 21 trot $300.

Friday — 3-year-old pace (closed) $600; 16 trot, $300; 17 pace, $300.

The closed race events are stake races made up early this year, with sizeable entry lists assuring a good turnout of horses. Some of the horses are to come from Marion and nearby counties.

GIANTS DEFEAT RAMS IN EXHIBITION GAME

Field Goal Is Margin of 17-14 Win.

By The Associated Press

AKRON, O., Aug. 31 — The post-mortems make the Cleveland Rams look as good as the New York Giants today—except in completing forward passes.

The Rams bowed to the eastern division champions of the National Professional Football league yesterday 17 to 14, the margin of victory being a 16-yard field goal booted by Ward Cuff before many of the 18,073 spectators were seated.

Aside from their failure to snag passes, the Rams made 13 first downs to the Giants' 13 and outgained the New Yorkers 325 yards to 319.

Driving 80 yards in seven plays, the Cleveland club scored its first touchdown in the second period, Parker Hall skirting left tackle after long runs by Dante Magnani and Gaylon Smith. Chet Adams added the extra point.

In the same period, the Giants took the lead again, Tuffy Leemans carrying the ball from the six-yard line. The New Yorkers advanced 62 yards, chiefly on passes, for the deciding touchdown in the third period.

Cleveland's second marker was set up in the fourth on a 35-yard pass, Hall to Ben Hightower, and Magnani circled right end to score.

The exhibition was the only game scheduled between the two National league clubs this season.

INDIANS, SENATORS SPLIT DOUBLE BILL

Five Double Plays Spark 3-1 Cleveland Win.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31—All even so far in their current series with Washington, the Cleveland Indians rested today before playing their last 1942 game in the nation's capital tomorrow.

The six-hit pitching of Al Milnar and a sparkling infield that turned in five double plays helped Cleveland to a 3 to 1 victory yesterday in the opener of a double-header with the Senators, but the Tribe was blanked 2 to 0 by Emil Leonard in the nightcap.

By dividing the twin bill, the Indians remained two games behind the third-place St. Louis Browns who broke even at Boston.

The Indians-Senators second game was finished under protest, Manager Lou Boudreau protested after Umpire Ernie Stewart ruled Keltner out for running off the base line on a bunt after Roy Weatherly had singles with one out.

Cleveland collected only five hits in each game Two of their three runs in the opener came on first inning singles by Weatherly and Keltner, a pass to Les Fleming and Jeff Heath's single.

Milnar drove in the other run in the fourth inning. He singled to score Roy Mack who had tripled. It was Al's sixth win against eight defeats.

In the nightcap, Leonard had the situation so well in hand that only two Tribesmen got as far as second base and none reached third. Mel Harder was charged with the loss

COLUMBUS IN SPOT TO RETAIN AMERICAN ASSOCIATION CROWN

10 Games Ahead for Red Birds As Season Enters Final Week.

By The Associated Press

The American association rolls into its final week of play today with three teams locked in one of the hottest scrambles for the pennant in the league's history.

After yesterday's double-headers, in which Kansas City and Milwaukee each won twice and Columbus halved, the race entered the fraction splitting stage in the percentage rankings. The present standings of the top three look like this:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Columbus	79	65	.51861
Kansas City	80	66	.54794
Milwaukee	78	65	.54545

The defending champions, the Columbus Red Birds, appear to have the easiest schedule before the association closes its bill Labor day and prepares for its annual playoff series.

Columbus still has 10 days to play, two more than Milwaukee and Kansas City. Those last contests are with Indianapolis, now in seventh place, and Toledo in fifth.

The Red Birds trounced Louisville 7 to 2 in the first game of a double-header yesterday, but dropped the nightcap 3 to 1 as Nelson Potter hurled a two-hit job for the Colonels.

Kansas City humbled St. Paul twice, 9-4 and 3-1. Milwaukee, too, scored a twin-win bumping Minneapolis 6-5 and 6-1. Toledo grabbed two close ones from Indianapolis, winning the first 2 to 1, the second 1 to 0.

11-GAME SCHEDULE WILL TEST POWERFUL NOTRE DAME 'T'-EAM

Frank Leahy Bases "Successfull Season" Hopes on Great Passing Ace.

This is one of a series of articles on football prospects at leading mid-western colleges and universities.

* * *

By The Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Aug 31—Angelo Bertelli, one of your favorite football players last year, is going to be the sling-shot in Notre Dame's revived operation of the "T" formation this fall, and if that isn't enough to scare the Irish's 11 opponents, a few words from Coach Frank Leahy should complete the pre-season paralysis deal.

Gloomy Frank, who tolls the bell most mournfully just before Notre Dame puts on its biggest demonstration of power and technique, foresees a "representative year, six or seven victories, but only if we get past Wisconsin in our opener."

Formidable Test

Without a doubt the Irish have bitten off a terrific chunk of football schedule for 1942, but as they go through their week by week mastication of opponents they may unfold another of those fine teams that bring recollections of the days of Knute Rockne.

Remember how the Irish went unbeaten last year, with only a tie with Army to mar the record? That was Leahy's first season at Notre Dame and the success he enjoyed—feeling his way as he had to do—was a tipoff that he may do even greater things this year.

While the Irish undoubtedly have their eyes only on that Sept. 26 opener with the Badgers as practice gets under way tomorrow, there's a formidable slate beyond, reading in this order: Georgia Tech, Stanford, Iowa Naval Pre-flight School, Illinois, Navy, Army, Michigan, Northwestern, Southern California, and Great Lakes.

The "T" formation, used in early days of Rockne, was brought back by Leahy in spring practice. Emphasis was lent his intention of doing a thorough job when Bob Snyder, understudy of the Chicago Bears' great "T" executioner, Sid Luckman, was hired as a backfield coach.

The sharp passing Italian boy, Bertelli, opened many an eye last year with his aerial ability as a sophomore, and there's no reason to think his effectiveness will be dimmed by the use of the "T." Angelo will be at quarterback, feeding the ball to other backs and throwing forward and lateral passes.

Dove Switched

In the line Jack Barry and Capt. George Murphy have the end positions staked out. Lou Rymkus is in at left tackle but there's a dispute between Larry Sullivan and Bob Neff for the other side. Bob Dove, a standout end last year, has been moved to left guard and Harry Wright, a former quarterback, has been sent to right guard. Wally Ziemba is back at center.

With a good supply of reserve material, Notre Dame should be able to keep up a fast offensive pace every minute it has the ball, all of which hints to a T-errific season for the Irish.

Cardinals Win 19 of Last 22 Games To Press National League Chase.

By The Associated Press

LIKE CUFFLESS TROUSERS and ceiling prices, that pennant duel between the Brooklyn Dodgers and St. Louis Cardinals which most folks figured would get here sooner or later—finally arrived.

After coasting along in the comparative safety of a lengthy lead through most of the National league campaign, the Dodgers found themselves separated from the threatening Cardinals today by only short games.

The Cardinals started the Dodgers down the hill, but the Chicago Cubs and Pittsburgh Pirates also got in a couple of licks, and plenty of other snipers probably are waiting.

Dodgers Break Even

The Dodgers fired both barrels at the Pirates yesterday and came away with nothing better than an even break, while the Cardinals swept a double-header with the Boston Braves for a total of 19 victories in 22 games.

Whitlow Wyatt pitched the Dodgers to a 3-1 decision in the opener, but the Bucs pounded Larry French and three relievers for a dozen hits in the night cap and triumphed, 9-5.

The Cardinals beat the Braves 8 to 3 in their first game, snapping a tie with a five-run outburst in the sixth. The second however went 11 innings before Max Gumbert, who pitched two-ball in five innings of relief, was bled for the run that won for him and the Cards, 3-2.

Reds Win Two

The Cincinnati Reds beat the Philadelphia Phils, 2-0 and 8-0 with Johnny Vander Meer hurling the shutout.

The New York Giants downed the Chicago Cubs, 8-6, in the first game, but the second ended in a 5-5 deadlock with darkness halting play after nine innings, during which Manager Mel Ott of the Giants made the 2,500th hit of his major league career

In the American league, St. Louis Browns helped ease some of the pressure off the New York Yankees by splitting with the Boston Red Sox while the Yanks were winning a pair from the Detroit Tigers.

Ruffing Wins 7-1

Red Ruffing pitched five-ball to beat the Tigers, 7-1, in the first game. A tenth inning single by pinch hitter George Selkirk decided the second for the Yanks, 4-3. Outfielder Tommy Henrich, making his last appearance before entering the coast guard, led the Yankee attack in the second game with three hits in three official times at bat.

John Niggeling hurled the Browns to a 4-1 first game victory, beating the Red Sox for the fifth time this year. The Sox bounced back to take the second, 12-6, but still trail the leaders by eight games.

Cleveland and Washington divided their bargain bill, the Indians winning the first game, 3-2, the Senators the nightcap, 9-2.

Ted Lyons won his weekly start for the Chicago White Sox, pacing a 2-1 decision over the Philadelphia Athletics. The A's scored for two runs in the ninth inning to squeeze out, 3-2 in the second game with Phil Marchildon registering four-hit ball.

Experimenters in Australia found that tung trees can be cultivated successfully in New South Wales and have increased the yield of fruit, obtaining oil equal to that of nese oil in quality.

MARION HAWKS WIN, 8-5, OVER FOSTORIA

Roseberry and Hilton Pace Ohio State Loop Win.

Joe Roseberry scattered eight hits as the Marion Hawks turned back the Fostoria Red Flares, 8-5, in an Ohio State semi-pro league game yesterday at Lincoln park. Merle Hilton paced the winners with three hits, including a double and a triple, in three trips to the plate.

Snatches of Sports

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
NEA Service World Sports Columnist

NEW YORK, Aug 31—A lot of people expect the next heavyweight champion to come out of the armed forces, but Lieut. Gene Tunney—the honest broadcaster who says that postwar champions will not be worth a hoot. They don't just happen, says Gene, they learn to fight. That is the reason. When Joe Louis goes in there to defend his title out of the other ring, of course, there are millions, literally, of customers in the "dark" towns who are getting their introduction to fighting in the army and navy camps. Then in the ring after the war rather than return to those towns.

Today's Guest Star—Porter Watkins, Joplin, Mo. Globe: "What with the action our forces are seeing in the Atlantic and Pacific and the scarcity of veteran baseball players in our colleges, it's going to be a tough season for kids."

This Beats the Band—When the Sherman, Tex., school board was clear out of candidates to fill the vacant football coaching job as every man they picked refused to take another job finally handed the task over to the school's band director, W. K. Sides, who once played football in college, but never had coached. He will earn band work in the morning and coach in the afternoon. Wonder what he'll do with the time between halves?"

New Basketball Plan Adopted in Union Co.

Special to The Star

MARYSVILLE, Aug 31 — A greatly reduced program has been adopted for the schools of Union county outside of Marysville which includes the cutting of the basketball schedule in half. School heads have decided to limit the basketball schedule to eight games instead of the 16-game list of last season.

The county is to be divided into two leagues to lessen driving and a play-off between leaders of the leagues probably will replace the usual county tournament. No softball competition will be held this season and declamation contests have been cancelled.

FOOD PRICES PIERCE CEILING

Several Items Threaten To Disrupt Effort To Control Living Costs.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Aug 31 — Lower ceilings on prices of several important foods not affected by ceilings are a threat to the nation's effort to keep down the cost of living, study of market prices and trends indicates.

Some retailers, both chain and food and grocery, have operated in violation of the ceilings, which were covered by the price control blanket spread over the nation early last spring.

The fact that the umbrella over food costs seeking to hold them to March peaks has been punctured in numerous places is no surprise to market experts. This is almost unavoidable, they say, considering the tremendous consumer buying power built up as a result of the war as well as heavy military requirements for long and huge export of important items like dairy and poultry products under lend-lease arrangement.

Puncturing of the ceilings of some foods and rises in prices of certain uncontrolled items have helped to lift the cost of eating since the ceilings went into effect in May. Ceilings were fixed at top prices quoted in March.

The latest Associated Press index of food prices was 82.79 compared with 76.61 at the March high, basis of ceiling prices on controlled foods. A year ago it was 74.03. The Dun and Bradstreet index, representing total wholesale price per pound of 31 foods, stood at $3.80, new peak since 1925, compared with $3.60 in March. This was 54 cents higher than a year ago and $1.51 higher than two years ago. A similar upturn is shown by the bureau of labor statistics analysis.

The following table of approximate wholesale prices in Chicago of representative commodities not covered by blanket price control shows what has happened. Seasonal variations account for some changes.

Mock Warfare On Camp Program of Marion's Co. H

Thirty-five men and three officers of Co. H, Ohio State Guard, participated in the first of a series of field exercises Sunday at the Uncapher farm two and a half miles south of Marion on the Barks road. Capt. Carl F. Ebert was in command.

The men left the Armory at 10 a. m. after rolling light packs and marched to the farm. Army mess prepared and donated by the Triangle Grill, was served at noon. Coffee was prepared in the field and the men washed their own dishes.

From 1 to 2 p. m. the men engaged in battle formations, including skirmish lines and approach marches and, in guerilla warfare manner, hunted "enemies" hidden in bushes. The men marched back to the Armory.

Lt. E. E. Smith was in charge of the field workout and Lt. H. D. Price was in charge of the preparatory work at the Armory.

Dates set for other field workouts are Sept. 20, Oct. 18 and Nov. 1.

Tonight Captain Ebert will begin a course of training directives for the non-commissioned officers. The first classes will be in elementary first aid, compass reading, map reading and orientation. The classes will be conducted every Monday night for an hour and a half, starting at 7. Regular two-hour training sessions will continue to be on Tuesday nights, starting at 7.

VFW Encampment Opens in Cincinnati

By The Associated Press

CINCINNATI, Aug 31—Delegates of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and its ladies auxiliary today began the 43rd annual encampments five-days of shaping a program to weld 6,000 local organized units into a "mighty force in America's fight to crush the axis powers."

Most of the anticipated 6,000 visitors arrived in time for last night's memorial service, but a heavy registration continued today.

Max Sinzer of Boston, VFW commander-in-chief has stressed unity in the war effort as the conclave's keynote and advised officers and delegates to "increase the effectiveness of our war activities as a nationwide organization" by the "principles and policies we shall adopt during the deliberations" here.

This morning's session included welcome addresses by General Chairman Charles Sawyer, Ohio Lieut. Gov. Paul M. Herbert and Mayor James Stewart.

6 WANDERING JUVENILES ROUNDED UP IN MARION

Four Boys and Two Girls Have Travels Halted.

Lure of the wide open spaces landed six juveniles in the hands of state highway, city and county officials here over the week-end.

Two 15-year-old boys, who gave their homes as Vanceburg, Ky., are enroute home today after appearing in juvenile court this morning. Picked up by city police Saturday night they were placed in the detention home. They were out looking for jobs, they told the officers.

The sheriff's office today released two boys to officers from Erie Pa., after they were picked up by the highway patrol Saturday night driving a car stolen at Erie.

Two girls, aged 13 and 9 years, from Lima, who came to Marion by bus, were picked up by city police and later were released to the father of one yesterday afternoon after their case had been heard by Judge Oscar Gast of the probate court. They came to Marion to visit the mother of one of the girls, they said.

O'NEIL CHARGES WLB DELAYS PRODUCTION

Rubber Co. Head Raps Professors on Board.

By The Associated Press

AKRON, O., Aug. 31—William O'Neil, Akron rubber executive, declared today the war labor board "is a detriment to real production."

"It is composed of four representatives of management, four of labor and four representing the public," said the president of General Tire & Rubber Co. "The representatives of the public usually are college professors, who probably are as far out of touch as a class with the American public as any men could be. The men picked for membership as public representatives are usually more radical than the labor leaders on the board, because they have no knowledge of the business of producing.

"I'd much rather trust the judgment of some honest labor leader than some equally honest but theoretical college professor whose entire life has been spent in contact with books and not with men and conditions."

O'Neil made these observations in a statement issued to clarify his remarks at a luncheon where the Akron Beacon Journal said O'Neil observed that the WLB "makes a racket possible" in that "management has lost the power to hire and fire."

COMPANIES DENY GUILT

By The Associated Press

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 31—Nine companies and six of their executives pleaded innocent before Federal Judge Thomas F. Meaney today to charges of conspiring to defraud the United States in the sale of insulated cable to the navy. Trial was set to start Nov. 9.

LOYAL FRIEND

Boy Runs Ad Today To Help Find Brother's Dog.

It has been said that a dog is a man's best friend and there is evidence in The Star tonight that it might be added, "A boy is a dog's best friend."

The boy in this case is 16-year-old Thomas Jack Byanski of 383 South Prospect street and the dog is the missing pet puppy of his 8-year-old brother, Billy Byanski.

When ordinary methods used in a search for the pet failed, Thomas didn't quit trying but instead thought up new ways. He dug up a picture of the dog, had an engraving made, bought some advertising space in the newspaper and, in tonight's Star, he is using the picture-advertisement appeal asking the public to help find the dog.

Tom works in a grocery and earned most of the money he laid down to have the engraving made and buy the advertising space. Mrs. Byanski has cooperated by offering a reward.

Hospital Board in Final Stages of Ticket Sale

With the first night of the horse show a little more than 24 hours in the offing, members of the Woman's Board of the Marion City hospital are nearing the finish of their intensive ticket selling campaign in the interest of their work at the City hospital.

The women are co-sponsors for the horse show which will be a highlight of the Marion County Fair opening Tuesday at noon in that they have been selling tickets for days on end. Proceeds will be used to purchase either an oxygen tent or an operating table for the hospital.

The show will be staged Tuesday and Wednesday nights. The tickets, which will sell for $1.50, will admit the holder to the show and grandstand on both nights and the daytime fair. For the benefit of purchasers who have not yet received their tickets, but have arranged for them through the hospital board, the women have set up headquarters at Hotel Harding where the tickets may be obtained.

A car driven by William Canada, 29, of 237 Senate street struck and damage a guy wire attached to a utility pole in front of 168 Nye street Saturday. Canada told police his auto swerved into the wire when a front tire went flat. The car was slightly damaged.

Cars driven by Dale Fish, 20, of 152 Dix avenue and William J. Peel, 48, of near Marion figured in a minor collision on North Main street early Saturday night.

GALION—A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Snyder of Galion at City hospital Saturday.

ADMIRAL HELPS OPEN NAVY RECRUIT DRIVE

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, Aug 31 — The man who directs the United States fleet's far-flung operations today lends a personal touch to a manpower drive to carry on "this people's war."

Admiral Ernest J. King, warmed by the hero's welcome accorded him in his native Lorain yesterday, comes here for an address signaling the opening tomorrow of a 60-day campaign for 10,000 naval recruits in the Cleveland area.

Making a half dozen appearances at London, the nation's ranking admiral promised his home townsmen the battle of the Solomon islands was "but a sample" of what the enemy can expect, and asked for more war tools.

"We need every tool of war we can lay our hands on and we need them as soon as we can get them," he told 3,000 workers and townspeople gathered in the yards of the American Ship Building Co.

"We have been able to furnish to our enemies on Tulagi in the Solomons area but a sample of what they're going to get. They'll get more as we get the killing tools. This is a people's war and we are all in it until it is won.

"Our great difficulty today is in implementing all of the eight fronts at the same time. We'll be able to do it, but first we must have more tools. The tools are chiefly in the making, and they must be made before we can put them to work. We must not forget that we're still amateurs at fighting compared to the people we are fighting.

"It's going to be a long war. We'll really hit our stride in about a year's time."

By then, he added, the number of men in the armed forces will have risen from the present 5,000,000 to about 8,000,000.

Grew Says Only Complete Defeat Will Crush Japs

Former U. S. Ambassador to Tokyo Tells Americans They Face Hard Fight To Win Victory.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Aug 31 — A "revengeseeking Japan can be crushed only by an offensive war leading to complete defeat in battle," Joseph C. Grew, for 10 years United States ambassador to Tokyo, told the nation last night.

Grew, in his first public report since returning on the exchange ship Gripsholm, warned that America was fighting a "powerful fighting machine, a people whose morale cannot and will not be broken even by successive defeats, who will certainly not be broken by economic hardships."

The Japs "individually and collectively will gladly sacrifice their lives for their emperor and their nation and can be brought to earth only by a complete defeat in battle," he asserted.

Confirming already stories of other Americans back from Japan, Grew told of the boycotting of captured soldiers and the "better care" given enemy American missionaries.

Grew said Japanese friends had endeavored to help him and other Americans imprisoned after the Pearl Harbor attack, but said that as patriots they, too, would fight for their emperor and country "to the last ditch if necessary."

First Public Statement

This ominous report, delivered in an address prepared for the Columbia Broadcasting System and constituting Grew's first public utterance since his return on the Gripsholm last week, was lightened only by a declaration that we could win the conflict through the exertion of our maximum capacities, individually and collectively, in a war of offense."

The diplomat also recounted the deceitful manner in which Foreign Minister Togo treated his presentation of President Roosevelt's eleventh hour message to Emperor Hirohito, keeping Grew in "entire ignorance" of the attack on Pearl Harbor even as conversations took place.

The atrocities, Grew said, represented "the ugly side" of the Japanese people—"the cruelty, brutality and utter bestiality, the ruthlessness and rapaciousness of the Japanese military machine which brought this war."

Personal friends of long standing, he related, tried to ease his days of imprisonment after Dec. 7 with gifts of food, "sometimes a piece of meat, which was the most precious gift they could confer because they themselves could seldom get meat. . . They were personally loyal to me at the end."

But as patriots, he continued, even these Japanese "will fight for their emperor and country, to the last ditch if necessary."

"The idea should not for a moment be entertained that the failure of the Japanese forces in China has discouraged the Japanese people," Grew said. "It has instead served to steel them for still greater sacrifices and to prepare them better for the war of deadly purpose to conquer upon which they have finally embarked."

Speaking of an offensive spirit which permeates all classes of Japanese people, the envoy reported that the Nipponese high command has counted heavily upon the advantage this would give them over less aggressive enemies. He declared:

"They have put great store in what they consider to be the white man's flabbiness. They look upon us Americans as constitutional weaklings, demanding our daily comforts and unwilling to make the sacrifices demanded for victory in a war against a military machine which has prepared and trained itself in Spartan simplicity and the hardness and toughness demanded by war.

"They attach great importance to the former disunity in the United States over the war issue.

"When they struck, they made no provision for failure, they left no road open for retreat. They struck with all the force and power at their command. And they will continue to fight in the same manner until they are utterly crushed."

Grew said there was no question in his mind but that Japan would eventually be crushed, but warned that if Americans think "we can continue to lead our normal lives we shall unquestionably risk the danger of a stalemate in this war of ours with Japan."

PRESIDENT TO SPEAK AT MEDICAL CENTER

Will Dedicate Naval Hospital at Bethesda, Md.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31—President Roosevelt will realize a dream come true late today when he dedicates with a 10-minute speech the new naval medical center at nearby Bethesda, Md.

The occasion will mark the 100th anniversary of the establishment of the navy's bureau of medicine and surgery and the formal christening of an imposing edifice which the President personally helped design in collaboration with his White House physician, Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, present chief of medical bureau with the title of surgeon general.

The address will be part of a 30-minute broadcast to be heard by American naval medical units throughout the world. It is expected to recall the heroic deeds of naval doctors in the past century and to underline the fact that billions are being spent for death-dealing machines of war other huge outlays are going to protect the sick and wounded.

Mr. Roosevelt's speech is scheduled for 4:30 p. m. All major radio networks will carry his remarks.

The Chief Executive has two other major addresses scheduled in the next seven-days—one Thursday before the International Student Service which will be broadcast to the youth of the world, and the other next Monday, a Labor Day speech on new ways to check inflation.

LOWER DRAFT AGE PREDICTED BY TAFT

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31—Action by congress to make 18 and 19-year-old men subject to the draft was predicted today by Senator Taft, Republican of Ohio, who said the selective service system ought to be overhauled at the same time to provide a fixed schedule of inductions.

Taft told reporters he had no doubt that congress would be called upon this fall to lower the draft age to meet the army's demand for younger men in the service.

At the same time he said a uniform national system of inductions should be established under which married men with children would not be called for active service until the eligible men in other classes had been exhausted.

Selective service recently has acted to set up statewide pools in which local boards cooperate to shift quotas so that married men will not be taken before the supply of eligible single men is exhausted. Previously local boards filled their quotas from their own lists, resulting in married men being called in some areas and not in others.

The Ohio senator said he thought the whole nation, rather than each state, should be placed on the pool basis and the schedule of induction fixed by law rather than left to the discretion of the administrative agency.

NAVAL AVIATION PICTURES AT FAIR

Lt. John Crawford of Columbus, accompanied by an aide, was in Marion today to complete arrangements for the showing of two naval aviation sound-movies on Wednesday and Thursday at the Marion County fair. The movies, made possible by the naval aviation cadet selection board in Columbus, will be in conjunction with the implement dealers' dixplay.

The naval flight board will set up temporaryp headquarters in the implement dealers' tent and in addition to the movies, flight interviews and examinations will be given. Thursday and Friday nights Lieutenant Crawford will speak to the grandstand crowds on the importance of naval aviation in the conduct of the war.

ALL AMERICAN AIRCRAFT SAFE, NOW USUAL STORY

This Is Report After Eight Raids by Bombers.

By The Associated Press

"All American aircraft returned safely.

Eight times now this has been the tag line capping the success of the United States army air force flying fortresses on the eight bombing raids they have made so far on occupied Europe.

Today the same line comes from American forces on two other continents.

In North Africa, medium and heavy American bombers blasted the axis supply port of Tobruk and enemy airfields east of Matruh, and—

All American aircraft returned safely.

Twice on successive days American medium bombers and fighters blasted the Japanese air base—supply depot town of Mitkyina, in northern Burma. Said the air force communique:

"From both raids there was no damage to our planes or personnel.

MARKET HOLDS GROUND TODAY

Generally Favorable War News Helps Stocks Hold Balance on Wall Street.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Aug. 31—Generally favorable war news helped the stock market keep its balance fairly well today, but it touched off little in the way of urgent buying demand.

Mild forward tendencies were displayed. Dealings were slow, however, and, while fractional plus marks were well distributed, minor declines were plentiful.

Tending to restrain bullish contingents, brokers said, was the desire to await the President's message to congress on his anti-inflation program. Wall Street still was hopeful regarding the tax problem but stuck to a wait-and-see policy.

Stocks on the upside at intervals included General Motors Chrysler American Telephone, Chesapeake & Ohio, U. S. Steel, and Anaconda. Occasional backwardness was shown by Bethlehem, Johns-Manville, Pennsylvania, Westinghouse, Goodrich and American Smelting.

WHEAT PRICES SAG ONE CENT A BUSHEL

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Aug. 31 — Wheat prices sagged almost a cent a bushel at times today as a result of profit taking attracted by highest quotations for more than a month and selling associated with biggest receipts of the season at Minneapolis and start of the September delivery period tomorrow.

Selling was not large, however, and price declines were checked by purchases based on continuation of active government lending on wheat collateral stored and kept off the market. Latest figures indicated about 10,000,000 bushels weekly are being stored for loans.

Pitfalls of Love

By ADELE GARRISON

"I WILL listen quietly," Noel promised, but his heavy voice gave little assurance of his ceasing to resent the patriotic service which Mary had rendered her country at my father's request.

"Thank you," I answered, then plunged into the story of the vital secret paper, which, my father had learned, was to be passed that night at Redfield, and of his urgent demand that Mary find out if possible where it was hidden.

I did not gloss over the methods Mary had used, but I tried to make Noel see that she had been protected every minute of the time she spent with the actor.

"My fathr took most elaborate precautions," I told him. "One of his men ate at the table next to Mary's, and another drove the taxi that took them to the restaurant.

Mary In No Danger.

"By keen perception Mary deduced that Redfield had hidden the document in his shoe, and she knew she must get him up to this room and into my father's power as soon as possible; also that she ran no risk in granting his plea to come up here for another drink, because my father and I were here."

In his bewilderment Noel broke his promise not to interrupt.

"But you weren't here with Mary when she opened the door," he said. "If you had heard the insulting way he spoke to her, you wouldn't wonder at my knocking him down. If Uncle Dicky hadn't grabbed me I'd have killed him—and I wish I had."

"No, you don't wish anything of the kind," I told him brusquely, "or you won't when you come to your senses. And let me assure you that we did hear what he said. We rushed into the bedroom when he knocked on the outer door, but left the door ajar. We both knew Mary was counting on Steve being so near the passing out stage that one more drink would send him under the table, so that my father could deal with him. And then you rushed in."

"Thank God I was in time to keep Mary from having to listen to any more of his drunken beastliness," he said, concern for Mary displacing his anger at her.

Timely Service.

"You were just in time to render my father an unexpected service," I said.

"I don't understand—" Noel began, but my father's entrance interrupted him.

"Dear boy!" my father said, clapping Noel on the shoulder. He told me later that he expected sullen resentment and was much relieved when Noel showed only bewilderment. "You certainly saved the day when you knocked that—that—polecat unconscious," he went on. "We hoped another drink would do the trick. But due to you, we had no delay in finding that important paper, and when Redfield recovers consciousness, he will have only a humiliating experience to remember, instead of a pleasant drinking bout.

Hopes To Learn More.

"Another most important count is this. When he comes to in the next apartment, where we are keeping him for the night, he'll be so befogged that one of my operatives, posing as a nurse, may be able to glean some further valuable information from his mutterings. My physician assures me that he will be a bit delirious."

I knew I was breaking one of my father's rules by asking a question at this point, but I could not keep from uttering it because of my concern for Mary.

"What is he going to do when he misses that document from his shoe?" I asked. "Won't he deduce that Mary must have found out about it, and was responsible for its disappearance?"

The Stars Say—

For Tuesday, Sept. 1.

AN EXCELLENT opportunity may be presented on this day for deriving very definite, probably surprising or peculiar benefits by means of clerveness, shrewdness, strategem, intrigue and faculties and forces seemingly operating from the realm of the so-called "fourth dimension." There may be either premonitions, insistent urges or compulsions, or "hunches" to do things seemingly impractical, idealistic or unwarranted but these will prove of solid worth and success.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of peculiar, strange and unaccountable experiences, although these will culminate in definite advantages and benefits. There may be inner guidings, strong intuitions or premonitions, or psychic urges, which may seem to move on dangerous grounds. These may, however, lead to success, ambitious transactions with secret orders, large corporations, diplomatic or political bodies. In all be alert to duplicity, imposition of glamorous intrigues. The ideals, soul aspirations and mystical tendencies may find practical expression in art, music, poetry or literature.

A child born on this day may have many talents of a creative and idealistic turn, culminating in exceptional success. Its intuitions, mystical and psychic urges may be the mainspring to practical progress.

YOUR HEALTH

Military Rejections.

WE HAVE some bitter complaints these days about rejections for the army or navy, but there is always a good reason for what the services do even if the examining doctor doesn't have time to explain it to the selectee at the moment of examination.

I heard a new angle the other day. A man had applied for the submarine service and was perfect physically in every way except that he had some dental bridge work which caused them to turn him down. He couldn't seem to reconcile this with the eternal scheme of things, nor could I until a navy medico explained to me that effective gripping of the mouthpiece of the submarine escape apparatus, or "lung," will be interfered with if crowns, bridges, dentures or even pyorrhoea are present, which seems reasonable.

Halitosis is also a cause for rejection in submarine service, which I also can understand: If you are cooped up in a small space with a fellow with bad breath it would lead, in my case, to mutiny.

The navy stresses vision and the army feet: "No arches — no marches."

The greatest consideration, however, in the examination of any selectee is the saving of government money after the war from pensions. In this field I see a great improvement over the selection in the last war, especially of those who have tuberculosis.

In 1917 there were boards set up to examine all draftees for tuberculosis, but they did their work in such an incredibly careless way that thousands of men with active tuberculosis were accepted. They often developed acute symptoms and broke down before they had been in the army six weeks.

Those who developed active symptoms in France and had to be cared for in army sanitaria cost the government millions of dollars. Most people even with active tuberculosis are entirely unaware of it and the examination has to be very special to detect it when no symptoms are present.

When an enlisted man, because of physical disability, is found to be unfitted for military service he is retained in the hospital until his condition has reached a point where he will no longer be benefitted by treatment in a military hospital. He is then given a Certificate of Disability for Discharge.

Many are weeded out quite early in their military career, the largest number within three months. Most of these are simply temperamentally unfitted for military life. They are continuously reporting for sick call for minor complaints, or they have indigestion, or their hearts flutter, or their backs ache, etc. They are much better off in civil life, where they recover with surprising aplomb.
